Large turnout in early voting

By Mike Steely steelym@knoxfocus.com

Not since the Obama-McCain election eight years ago has there been such a heavy turnout in Knox County during early voting and School Board. Tuesday's Primary Election Day could reach a total of some 100,000 ballots being

Davis said that Republican voters should be aware that the local races appear at the bottom of the long ballot, below the names for candidates for president and The heaviest voting, as the selection of delegates.

Knox County Board of Education Conducting Interim Superintendent Search

The Knox County Board of Education is now accepting letters of interest from individuals who may wish to be considered for appointment as Interim Superintendent of the Knox County Schools until a permanent replacement is hired. Board of Education member Terry Hill (District 6) has been charged by the School Board with reviewing possible Interim Superintendent candidates and making a recommendation to the full Board of Education.

At its February 17 called meeting, the Knox County Board of Education voted to approve a timeline for hiring an interim superintendent:

- March 7 deadline to receive letters of interest
 - March 8 review process begins
- April 4 recommendation presented to the Board of Education
- April 6 Board of Education to vote on interim superintendent recommendation

Interested individuals do not have to currently be employed by the Knox County Schools (KCS) in order to be considered for the interim post. However, the School Board has developed a list of desired characteristics of the Interim Superintendent, which includes: a background in education, significant familiarity with KCS (including staff and budget), experience in KCS or a system with similar demographics, flexibility, willingness to work collaboratively with School Board and other elected officials and ability to communicate effectively with all stakeholders. The full list can be seen on the Knox County Schools website. Due to existing School Board policy, no person serving the Knox County Schools in the capacity of Interim Superintendent will be eligible to apply for the permanent superintendent position.

Letters of interest and resumes of interested individuals should be submitted to Terri Coatney, Board of Education Executive Assistant, at terri.coatney@knoxschools.org, by close of business on Monday, March 7, 2016.

LWV and South Knox Elementary Host Community Schools Celebration

By Sally Absher sallyabsher@knoxfocus.com

The League of Women Voters celebrated Knox County's Community Schools Initiative On Thursday, February 25 with a reception and program at South Knoxville Elementary School, one of Knox County's newest Community Schools. Guests included Mayors Madeline Rogero and Tim Burchett, City Council Member George Wallace, County Commissioner John Schoonmaker, Board of Education member Amber Rountree, and over a hundred teachers, parents, students, and community members.

County Commission

Wrecker charges, vouchers and next county budget

The Knox County Commission will be talking to the Sheriff's Office to ask about policies regarding wrecker service charges. Commissioner Ed Brantley brought up the matter last week and compared the current system to "the Wild West."

Brantley called on a citizen who had complained to him about a $500 charge from a wrecker service to haul his damaged car 15

Paul Johnson told the commission that he had a wreck over the Thanksgiving deputy responding to the incident asked if he had a preferred wrecker service. Johnson did not and asked the deputy to call a wrecker for him. He said after the tow he was surprised by the charges and when he asked for a copy of the itemized bill he could not get one and had to take a photo of the invoice with his cell phone's camera. Brantley said the City of Knoxville has a limit on charges and that wrecker services must be authorized to operate in city limits. He said the county has no holiday and the sheriff's policy at all and wreckers can charge anything they like.

"The customer should know what they are up against," Brantley said.

"Every citizen should be treated fairly. Somehow we've got to come up with what's fair," said Commissioner Bob Thomas. Commissioner Mike

Brown asked if the sheriff's department has a list of wrecker services, asked who's on the list and who sets the cost. "We need someone from the sheriff's department here next month," Brown Commissioner Brad

Anders said creating a policy to govern wrecker service in the county would be "a cost matter" and is not simple. Brantley said he wasn't suggesting any type of regulation but something needs to be developed where "someone doesn't feel like they are being had."

asked Brantley to meet with the sheriff's department and report back to the commission.

Commissioner Charles Busler brought up school vouchers and said that although a recent state legislature attempt failed, the county needs to clarify its standing on an existing "We have school vouchers here," he said, explaining that Knox County has an existing voucher program for disabled students. He said that once a student leaves public schools on a voucher program the money follows the student to a private school. If the student returns to public school the funding remains with the private school.

Busler told The Focus that a senate and house bill passed and became active on June 26, 2015 and provides $6,000 in funds directly to the parents of Chairman Dave Wright a disabled student for use with a private school. He said the state-wide program could take money from public schools and possibly lead to private or charter schools that only cater to handicapped students.

> He said he had met with the county law department and confirmed the existence of the state policy.

> The commission began discussing the next budget for Knox County and Knox County Finance Director Chris Caldwell said that Mayor Tim Burchett will present his proposed budget on May 9th.

Caldwell said that Burchett and school superintendent Dr. James McIntyre are working together and that the Finance Department will "start in earnest" this week on a budget. He said that financial growth has been good, sales tax collection is up and the state's contribution to the county is expect-

I may have mentioned in a past story that I had

Walker years ago when he opened a store back in the 1970s, in Rogersville, Tn. It was a modern facility right on one of the primary streets leading into the Hawkins County seat. He greeted me at the door and give me a tour, explaining why certain goods are placed where in the store. Having seen him on television as a child I was impressed by the aging businessman's knowledge of his shoppers, what they wanted, and how to sell them things they may not have even wanted.

The Cas Walker stores were the forerunners of all the modern supermarkets. He knew exactly what he was doing and how to make a profit. At one time there were 27 stores scattered across our region in three states.

Walker came from a very humble beginning in Sevier County. He had very little formal education, and worked here and there including the coal mines in Kentucky. He saved his money and, in 1924, bought into a grocery store. 1998 at age 96, Walker had become a very wealthy man. He had also become a political force in Knoxville and Knox County.

Cas Walker often referred to himself as "The Old Coon Hunter" and considered himself a common man, but he became a local legend, a powerful politician, and the owner of 27 grocery stores in three states.

Elected to city council in and then, 20 years later, 1941 and serving briefly as mayor in 1946 before being ousted in a recall election Walker jumped and was re-elected in 1947. By the time of his death in From 1940 until 1970 Cas Walker played politics and most often was victorious in his causes. At one time he supported combining the city and county government turned around and helped defeat the unification of both jurisdictions.

On his death Knoxville right back into that fight Mayor Victor Ashe ordered flags in the city to fly at half-mast. Walker left this life with about $1.3 million in his estate. "The Old Coon Hunter" is buried in Woodlawn Cemetery.

From State Representative Harry Brooks

This week I would like to turn your attention to the proposed 2016-2017 fiscal year budget. The total amount for FY16-17 is $34.8 billion, with $16.4 billion coming from state appropriations, $13.2 billion coming from federal funds, and $5.2 billion from other departmental revenues. This is an increase of $833.6 million in total funding, but know that federal funding has increased by $429.8 million. It is my great pleasure to tell you all that no new state debt has incurred in the proposed budget, but we actually have a surplus and a healthy rainy day fund. I would like to highlight certain aspects of the budget, especially a number of items that assist our education efforts. Governor Haslam has set objectives for our budget this year which are: to be realistic about revenue growth; to achieve operational efficiencies; to reward employee performance and improve market competitiveness of our cash compensation. He also wants the budget to support his priorities of education, health, child services, and social services. These ideas and priorities reflect the Governor's priorities now and in the past.

In regards to education, the proposed budget has allocated $10.4 billion dollars to the operation of our schools, $6 billion has been recommended for K-12 education, while $4.4 billion to our higher education system. With our local school boards assistance, teachers should experience a new pay raise to the extent that they have not experienced in recent years because we are allocating $104.6 million to their salary component in FY16-17. Other increases in the budget that has

Safety Center survey created

Community activist and Safety Center Committee member Vivian Shipe has created a survey to get opinions of a proposed Safety Center in Knox County. Shipe, a vocal supporter of the center, which would serve mentally ill people arrested for minor offenses, is circulating the petition online and on Facebook and is hoping to get some response from anyone interested. "I created and prepared the survey. It is designed to raise awareness of the number of people in jail who are mentally ill. It gives us an idea of the support from the citizens for a center and asks for their input on ideas and county commission and can mail the survey to Box 1973, Knoxville, Tn. 37901."

She said that citizens have the resources and suggestions that would help and added, "We all see through different eyes."

"When we collected names in 2014 many people indicated a willingness to be a group home or temporary housing in the community," Shipe said.

"As a community representative I have to try to reach all venues to be fair," she said. The next meeting of the Safety Committee is set for March 14th in the Cityconcerns," Shipe told The Focus. County Building. Before then the "Citizens can contact their county mayor and sheriff are planning a meeting with Governor Haslam's administration to see how the state may get involved. Questions remain if such a facility would be county, regional, or state funded and operated. Shipe said respondents do not have to provide a name or contact unless they choose to do so. Questions on the survey include:

- Are you aware that 25% of the jail population in Knox

- were the mentally ill could be taken for care instead of jail would you favor such
- a facility? Do you know of individuals who suffer from mental illness that would benefit from a Safety Center?
- Do you feel there should be state, city and county funds committed in development of a Safety Center for the mentally ill?
- Do you have any suggestions or input to share with the commission concerning the development of a Safety Center?

How good to those who seek!....

Jesus, our only joy be thou,

These beautiful words were transcribed by Bernard of Clairvaux.

Who? you ask.

Bernard was born in 1090 to parents who both belonged to the highest nobility of Burgundy. He was the third of a family of seven children, six of whom were sons. He had a great taste for literature and devoted himself for some time to poetry.

the age of twenty-two he was at prayer in a church and felt the calling of God to become a monk. Three years later he and twelve other monks founded a monastery which Bernard called Clairvaux.

all entered Clairvaux to pursue a religious life. He composed many and varied spiritual works that still speak to us today.

"Love has hands to help others. It has feet to hasten to the poor and needy. It has eyes to see misery and want. It has ears to hear the sighs and sorrows of men. This is what love looks like."

Written by Augustine of Hippo (Algeria) also known as Saint Augustine, who was a Christian theologian and philosopher. At the age of thirty -one he converted to Christianity. His conversion was prompted by a childlike voice he heard telling him "to take up and read" which he took as a divine command to open the Bible and read the first thing he saw. The specific part to which he opened his Bible was Romans, chapter 13, verses 13 and 14.

It is remarkable to me that through the centuries, through the Crusades, through the persecution of Christians, there were men such as these two who stood firm in their beliefs, who loved God with all their soul and passed to future generations, the fruits of their labors. We are able to enjoy their writings, their music, their poetry and their spiritual moments.

They were and are a blessing.

Marx said capital is

Einstein said everything

Foul weather and foul moods

Here we are stuck in another winter. Punxsutawney Phil lied, although no human ought to put stock in anything a groundhog does or doesn't do. I don't understand why anyone would declare that winter is his or her favorite season. What I've noticed of late is that this cold weather has a negative of weather has a negative effect on most of us.

Dogs seem to know how much we humans hate cold, raw, wet weather. They lie in wait for their humans to fall into the deepest stages of sleep. Then they begin whining and pawing and barking, signals that it's time to go outside to take care of business. So, humans fall out of bed, put on something warm, and brace themselves for the trek to those favorite spots our pets have. When they finish relieving themselves, those canines decide the time is right to sniff out critters in yards or wooded areas nearby. Owners tighten the leash and drag the animals back toward the house. If the dog is especially in an ornery mood, it will begin the cycle again at least one more time before dawn.

Folks who work don't have much love for winter weather. Overnight snow or sleet or ice cause havoc. People rise at the usual time and turn on the television to find out if their worksites are closed for the day. Some bosses make decisions early enough so that employees can hit the road or hit the sack again. Parents hold their breaths as they watch the screen for school closings. If weather shuts schools or delays opening, moms and dads scramble to find childcare. If all else fails, a coveted vacation day is burned.

Workers seem to be trapped in perpetually foul moods during the winter. They wear frowns and scowl about everything. The camaraderie that is present during spring and summer hibernates during winter and is replaced with a "Bah, Humbug" attitude. Kindness is in short supply; it's replaced with stinging retorts that come about inconsequential comments and icy stares that could give winter's temperatures competition.

People withdraw from the world during the cold season. Instead of participating in activities or visiting with friends, many adults choose to stay home. They wrap up in a warm blanket and stare for hours at the television or computer screen. Others catch up on reading books by their favorite authors. Some who are like me find staying awake almost impossible. My bedtime is embarrassingly early because the bed is one place where I can warm my frozen feet and hands.

The winter also is responsible for poor personal health. People don't feel like exercising. Instead, they would rather sit at home and eat "comfort food." We load up on carbs but never take the initiative to burn the stuff up through exercise. If only sleep could serve as a weight control, those of us who shovel in the food during winter could maintain our weight or have it rise just a bit.

Right now, few things bring a little light and warmth to my world. Amy and the kids always spread happiness and fun to the cold weather. Although it takes a toll on my already aching body, work is a good place to be since I can share time and cut up a little with other workers. Coming home, I can look forward to the love and excitement that canine Sadie offers. We play and lie around on the couch like lumps.

In no time, the days will grow longer and temperatures will warm. More outside time is coming, and with it are an endless list of jobs. Still, I'll take that any time as long as I can wear my shorts and enjoy the sweat that comes working in the yard. I'm just trying to hold on right now. What about you?

Newell Sanders

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

For a time, there was no more influential Republican in the State of Tennessee than Newell Sanders. Sanders was a Republican at a time when the GOP was at a distinct disadvantage in the Volunteer State, yet he helped to build his party and became a power in the national councils of the GOP. Extraordinarily successful in business. Newell Sanders was a devoted family man. Once when being interviewed by a reporter, Sanders said, "I don't want a word to go out about myself." Newell Sanders explained he preferred not to have anything at all written about him unless his wife was mentioned as well.

"While I worked, she saved," Sanders told the reporter. "She is entitled to as much credit for whatever I may have done in every relation of life as I am."

Kenneth D. McKellar, who was a congressman from Memphis when Newell Sanders briefly served in the United States Senate, later recalled that Sanders was "devoted" to his wife and their married life was "very beautiful." The two were also diametrically opposed politically and would contest one another in 1922 for the U.S. Senate.

Newell Sanders was as bitterly a partisan Republican as McKellar was a Democrat. When appointed to serve in the United States Senate in 1912, ures of his time. Yet the two men were personal friends while fighting one another vigorously politically. Both men were strong advocates of "temperance," meaning they favored prohibition of alcoholic beverages.

Newell Sanders was not a native Tennessean; in fact, he was a Hoosier, having been born in Owen County, Indiana on July 12, 1850. After attending college, Sanders operated a small bookstore, which he closed in 1877 when he moved to Chattanooga, Tennessee. Sanders later laughingly recalled the bookstore had been the very definition of a failed business.

It was in Chattanooga that Newell Sanders first experienced real success in business and eventually owned several factories that manufactured farm equipment. Sanders rose in the business world and participated in the community and political life of his adopted city. Sanders of Education and as a city alderman. With business success, he was invited to join the board of directors of several enterprises, not the least of which was the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad. Sanders was also president of the Chattanooga Steamboat Company.

Eventually Sanders would come to wield so much influence inside Tennessee's Republican Party that he was denounced as a "boss".

Sanders was not afraid to fight for his convictions and some of the Republican state conventions became rather violent affairs between rival factions. Newell Sanders was a strong proponent of H. Clay Evans from Chattanooga and was attacked by a fellow delegate who was committed to the rival faction of the Tennessee Republican Party, headed by Walter P. Brownlow. The two exchanged heated words until, according to the New York Times, Sanders was "almost choked into insensibility."

The two factions were feuding when the national Republican Party split between President William Howard Taft and former Theodore president Roosevelt. Sanders, as Chairman of the Tennessee Republican Party, had been warned the faction led by Congressman Walter P. Brownlow was "inflamed" Sanders served alongside by whiskey, rowdy and just surely won, but the elec-Luke Lea, one of the most down right dangerous. tion was brazenly stolen gutter. controversial political fig- Friends told Sanders his by Governor Peter Turney's personal safety was at risk but the chairman ignored the warnings and tried to open the convention. Sanders was assaulted with one eyewitness recalling the senator's suit coat being torn off his body and shredded. His pocket watch and wallet were later found lying on the floor where he had been accosted. It took Sanders an hour to reach the podium, but reach it he did, albeit bloody and battered.

> Once at the podium, Sanders was attacked again and a group of Brownlow supporters literally tried to throw the Chattanoogan off the dais. The situation became even more dire when one fellow produced a hatchet and raised it above his head, intent upon doing even greater harm to the bleeding Sanders.

Bob Sloan, a local sheriff, intervened, whipping out his pistol and barking, "If anyone dares touch Newell me God."

and perhaps saved the life of Newell Sanders.

The Brownlow adherents sobered up and melted away that same night. The next day, Sanders presided as a delegation committed to the renomination of President Taft was elected.

Despite having been literally kicked, beaten and mauled, Newell Sanders, who knew the men who had attacked him, never uttered a single word of condemnation against any of them.

It was Newell Sanders who managed H. Clay Evans' gubernatorial campaign in 1894, a campaign the Chattanoogan almost supporters.

Even his opponents recognized Newell Sanders' determination. One friend said of Sanders, "When Newell Sanders starts he knows whither he is bound and he keeps going. It may take him two years or five years to get there, but he invariably arrives at his destination. If he were not a good Baptist I would say that all hell couldn't stop him."

Newell Sanders promoted the candidacy of Ben W. Hooper for the GOP nomination for governor in 1910. The normally dominant Democratic Party was torn asunder by infighting, which was largely over the highly divisive issue of prohibition. The 1908 gubernatorial primary had been a brutal affair with Governor Malcolm R. Patterson challenged by former U. S. Senator Edward Ward Carmack. Senator Carmack was the

It was not an idle threat against liquor and spirits. Governor Patterson who freely admitted he enjoyed a drink now and then, was personally and politically "wet". Patterson won and Carmack, a newspaper editor by trade, began writing vitriolic editorials verbally assaulting the governor and many of his friends. One such friend was Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, who profoundly resented being skewered in print regularly. Colonel Cooper demanded Carmack cease his attacks, but the stubborn redheaded editor refused. Carmack met Colonel Cooper and Cooper's son Robin on a Nashville street corner. Shots were fired and Edward > tion completely blew apart Tennessee's Democratic Party. Governor Patterson's pardoning Colonel Cooper caused an even deeper rift. Sanders helped to engineer the nomination of Ben W. Hooper over veteran Republican warhorse Alf A. Taylor. As Sanders had guessed, the intraparty warfare between Democrats gave the Republicans the opening they needed to win. Ben Hooper defeated Senator Robert Love Taylor in the general election. Hooper had been an orphan, the result of an affair and was selling newspapers as a boy before being put into an orphanage. Hooper was later adopted by a physician who was in reality his biological father. Hooper had gone to Oklahoma for a time and reputedly made $150,000 by trading in real estate in the Sooner State. It was an enormous sum for the time, more than $3,500,000 in today's currency. The former waif had been elected governor of Tennessee, which had been managed by Newell Sanders.

When Senator Robert L. Taylor died on March 31, 1912 following surgery for gallstones, Governor Hooper appointed Newell Sanders to fill the vacancy. Sanders was the first Republican to serve Tennessee in the United States Senate since William G. Brownlow in 1875; Sanders was the last Republican to serve in the U.S. Senate from Tennessee until Howard Baker's election in 1966.

As an ardent prohibitionist, Senator Sanders sponsored a bill which prohibited interstate shipment W. Carmack lay dead in the of alcohol into dry states. The bill passed Congress he aged. He self-published and Sanders was aghast when his bill was vetoed by President Taft. Undaunted, Sanders helped to override the president's veto and the bill became law. Sanders served in the Senate until the legislature elected W. R. Webb, who only served from January 24, 1913 until March 4, 1913. Newell Sanders returned to his business interests and Republican politics. The GOP swept Tennessee in 1920 with seventy-two year old Alf Taylor finally winning the governorship. Republicans won congressional seats in the First, Second, Third, Fourth, and Seventh districts. Warren

Harding carried Tennessee

Perhaps thinking 1922 might be an equally good year for Republicans, Newell Sanders announced he would be a candidate for the United States Senate. Sanders challenged incumbent Kenneth D. McKellar, who had been the first U.S. senator elected by popular vote in Tennessee. Sanders ran as a conservative, accusing McKellar of dangerously liberal sentiments. McKellar had perfected the art of constituent service and easily dispatched a robust challenge inside the Democratic primary, winning by a far greater margin than many supposed possible. During the course of the fall campaign rumors were rampant that Tennessee's senior U.S. senator, John Knight Shields, would be appointed to the United States Supreme Court by President Harding. Senator Shields, a former justice of the Tennessee Supreme Court, very much desired to serve on the high court. Newell Sanders was rumored to be Governor Taylor's choice to serve in the Senate should John Knight Shields receive the appointment to the Supreme Court. The rumors did little to aid Sanders's actual Senate campaign. Already past seventy, Sanders was not able to wage an especially energetic campaign. He did have a core of support in the state as he controlled most of the federal patronage. McKellar almost leisurely defended his record in the Senate and even those who did not admire the senator felt sure he would be reelected. Governor Taylor was defeated by Clarksville attorney Austin Peay and Senator McKellar beat Newell Sanders overwhelmingly. Sanders won 32% of the vote. Newell Sanders remained active in business and political affairs, but his health became increasingly frail as a book of memoirs, mostly for his grandchildren. For the last several years of his life, the former senator suffered a variety of ailments. Sanders died peacefully at his home on Lookout Mountain on January 26,

Newell Sanders held just about every office available to a party leader in his adopted state. Sanders was a man of strong opinions and convictions and he remained true to his beliefs. Newell Sanders held the respect and affection of his friends and the love of his family. Few could ask

Connecting With Words

The package arrived shortly before Christmas. Certainly, the sender had made it look special in a "Peanuts" mailer. When I tore into it, it was special! Three framed photos. Instantly, my mind drifted back to the day they were made. Several years ago I had the opportunity to audio tape a commercial for my dentist, Dr. Tim Williams, who was in private practice at the time. I remember sitting in front of that huge microphone at the radio station. It was so much fun, and I felt like I was in my element! Thankfully, Irene Hodges met me there and to bring her camera.

From my high school graduation speech, "The Next Step," so many years ago through years of church leadership roles to writing this true, humaninterest column, I have learned that speaking and writing are much alike. The goal of both is to connect with the audience.

Five years ago I began this column with "The Real McCoy," published February 7, 2011. Dr. Kyle McCoy is the cardiologist who treated our mother when she had a heart attack. I did not plan the storyit just came to me in the emergency room. A few months earlier, the same thing happened with "Life is a Gift." The story came to me after I learned of Zane Daniel's death. Zane and John J. Duncan, Jr., were the attorneys I worked for during college. As Focus readers may recall, I have written about many people, places, pets, events, and projects. I have so many more stories promised yet to write. This is column No. 268. Great stories are all around us in our everyday lives. Many of you have let me know that my columns have, in some way, been a connection for you. Thank you for being a faithful reader of the Knoxville Focus and, particularly, of my columns for the last five years! God bless!

graduation rates, and college readiness. It is our belief that for us to achieve more college degrees, we have to focus on our high schools. To do this, we have continued to fund programs such as Drive to 55 Initiative and LEAP 2.0. In FY16-17 we have proposed to invest $15.3 million into these programs to help us get to 55% of Tennesseans with a college degree.

Chuck Comer, This Milk's for You

After cutting down the net following his team's Knox County Middle School tournament championship, veteran West Valley basketball coach Chuck Comer takes a verbal jab at Peyton Manning's Super Bowl post-game "Budweiser" comment.

By Steve Williams

West Valley boys basketball coach Chuck Comer took exception to a Super Bowl post-game comment made by Peyton Manning and expressed it after guiding his Wolves to the Knox County Middle School tournament championship Feb. 16.

When he finished the traditional cutting down of the net following a 47-41 win over Northwest, the veteran coach turned around on the ladder and told the fans, "I'm going to go home and hug my wife and have a big glass of milk."

Comer's comment was in reaction to Manning saying he was going to drink a lot of Budweiser to celebrate the Denver Broncos' Super Bowl win over the Carolina

Panthers Feb. 7.

As he was interviewed by CBS' Tracy Wolfson after the game, Manning said: "I've got a couple of priorities first. I'm gonna go kiss my wife and my kids. I want to go hug my family. I'm gonna drink a lot of Budweiser tonight Tracy, I promise you that."

Comer pointed out Manning mentioned "Budweiser" twice on national television and is concerned about what kind of influence that could have on young quarterbacks across the country who look up to Manning.

The former University of Tennessee quarterback did receive some negative criticism on the national scene for his comments.

It is believed Manning

mentioned the beer because he reportedly owns a stake in a Budweiser distributor in his home state of Louisiana. The value of mentioning Budweiser as Manning did climbed to $13.9 million by the morning after the Super Bowl, according to one estimate. A spokesperson for Budweiser said the company did not know Manning was going to name the product on the air.

DANDY DEFENSE: Coach Comer credited his defense with carrying the bulk of the load as West Valley broke away from a tie after three periods and defeated the two-time defending champion Rangers.

When Hardin Valley Academy hits the baseball field to open the 2016 season, it will do so in a different role. The Hawks shocked the Tennessee

"We enjoyed the ride last year and we didn't get too high or too low." Avoiding complacency is big for any defending champion but it may be especially crucial for the Hawks, who play in the most competitive and deepest league in the state. District 4-AAA features HVA, state tournament regular Farragut (which has won multiple titles and lost to Hardin Valley in last year's title game in Murfreesboro); Maryville, which has a solid program and will feature a new coach in former Catholic head man Adam Sullivan (who led the Irish to two consecutive Class AA State Championship Games before departing for Blount County)

the Hawks won't take anybody in the league by surprise in 2016. "You have to show up ready to play every night in this district and there's simply no doubt about that," he said. "You have Farragut and Bearden. Maryville has that winning mindset and Adam is a great coach.

"He's walking into a situation where he'll soon have some great facilities. Heritage and William Blount will also be good."

Top returners for the Hawks include: Dylan Harris (senior, pitcher/center field); Ryder Green (sophomore, pitcher/infielder); Tyler Thompson (senior, pitcher/ outfielder/first baseman); Matt Martin (a senior who will make the transition from the outfield to shortstop) and Landon Beyer (senior, catcher/designated hitter).

Those players were all around for last year's Cinderella State Championship run, but many will now be thrust into different roles and some will become starters for the first time.

"We have guys in different positions and we lost a lot of seniors but we have guys who were around last year," Michalski said. "They will now have to step up and make significant contributions.

"It's their turn now."

Top newcomers include: A.J. Johnson (a junior utility infielder) and Kevin Marth (a senior pitcher who will be relied upon heavily after being injured last season). Michalski is still getting acquainted with his 2016 squad. But he has plenty of old faces playing and new places.

"We have a lot of question marks," he said. "When you come to see us play, you'll see guys in different spots.

"Matt Martin has never played shortstop. Landon Beyer was a DH last year and now, he'll have to step up and catch but he receives the ball well. We'll move A.J. all around the infield. Tyler will also see some time at first base."

Bearden senior Anajae Stephney (30) lunges to defend a shot by William Blount's Abbey McGuire in last week's district championship game at West High. The Lady Bulldogs notched a 58-53 comeback to win the title.

Nor did a district tournament championship.

Bearden found itself down early but rallied back to nab a title when it outlasted William Blount 58-53 in the district championship at West High School on Monday, Feb. 22.

The Lady Bulldogs (25-5) faced a 43-38 deficit heading to the final quarter before finally getting things together in the final frame.

"We knew that we were going to get their best," Bearden coach Justin Underwood said. "Our seniors knew the scene. They've been in these situations before and they've played a lot of basketball.

"They've played a lot of games in a championship atmosphere and they came up big for us tonight and I'm just blessed to be able to coach them."

Geer had a key offensive rebound and putback to pull Bearden to within 43-42 early in the fourth quarter and later knocked down a huge shot to trim the Lady Governors' advantage to 48-47 with 4 minutes, 45 seconds remaining.

Stephney had some clutch buckets, crucial rebounds and made a late steal to set up a bucket by Hagood, Hagood, Bearden's senior point guard, who sat out several games due to a back injury, scored off Stephney's steal and later hit a 3-point shot with 2:02 left to give Bearden a 55-51 of William Blount's reach.

Geer, who finished with 12 points (and had 16 in the semifinals against Hardin Valley Academy), was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player. Hagood, who scored six points over the final eight minutes, was named to the all-tournament team along with Stephney and sophomore guard Trinity Lee, who scored 17 points and knocked down three jumpers from beyond the

'The will to win' carries Heritage boys to first district crown

By Steve Williams

Through a lifetime of coaching, Bill Duncan knows something that's hard

"Everybody talks about winning," said Duncan, Heritage High's veteran boys basketball coach. "It's not about winning. It's about the will to win."

Duncan said his players had just that going for them as they pulled out a 67-64 overtime win over No. 3 seed Bearden in the District 4-AAA tournament championship game Tuesday night at West High School.

"The last three weeks we decided we had the will to do that and we worked hard," he added.

The reward was the Mountaineers' first-ever district title.

"This is the second time in two years we've been in the district championship - another school record," noted Duncan, who is in his fourth season at Heritage and 43rd year overall. "We've averaged 20 wins a year the past three years. I'm really proud of them. We've come a long

Actually, Heritage and Bearden didn't get to play the title game last season due to a string of postponements created by wintry weather. That wasn't the case this year and the nip-and-tuck contest went right down to the wire.

With his team clinging to a onepoint lead, Heritage's J.P. Pearson, a 5-9 junior, took a charge with 11.4 seconds remaining – one of the biggest defensive plays in the game. Teammate Blake Ervin was fouled right away and made two free throws to up the Mountaineers' lead to

Fulton captures district title and faces tough region By Steve Williams

Maryville smothers Admirals, 50-25, to salvage third place

By Steve Williams

Maryville's sticky man-to-man defense never let Farragut get comfortable in the District 4-AAA basketball tournament's boys consolation game.

How sticky was it?

If the Admirals' Nick Rogers, the district's MVP in the regular season, was chewing gum in last Tuesday night's contest, also known as The Game to Avoid Oak Ridge, the Red Rebels could tell you the flavor.

Maryville held Farragut to 10 points in the first half en route to a 50-25 victory. The Admirals labored to get off decent shots in the 16 minutes before intermission, much less make shots. "They were up on us," said Rogers, describing the Maryville defense. "With it being the district tournament, most teams are going to amp it up a little bit. I think they "That offensive total was probably as low as it gets for us this season. We couldn't hit the shots." Rogers, who scored 31 in the previous game between the two teams, said Maryville did a lot of hand checking. "The referees called it closer earlier in the season. They were just letting them play tonight."

Brothers Easton and Tristan Upchurch scored 17 and 12 points, respectively, to lead top seed Maryville (22-6) to third place. They also combined to make seven of the Rogers, a 6-2 junior guard, was Farragut's lone double digit scorer with 11 points, 10 below his average.

Maryville led 13-6 after the first stop. Farragut reserve Shawn McKay hit a 3-pointer from the right corner to pull the Admirals within four early in the second period, but they would manage only one point the remainder of the quarter, while the Rebels piled up 15 points.

It was 36-18 at the end of three.

"It was more of taking away Nick Rogers than their man-to-man," said Farragut Coach Chris Cool. "Every time he touched the ball, they would double team him. He averages 21 points. He's the heart of our offense. I'm surprised other teams haven't done it until now.

"And their defense was being real physical with him,

Cool figured about three times as many fouls were called in his team's semifinal game against Bearden. "You have to adjust to how the game is being called,"

Despite the fourth place finish in the tourney, Rogers said the Admirals had exceeded expectations this

"I think they picked us sixth," said Rogers. "We just went game by game. I think we did pretty good this season and it's not over."

Farragut was scheduled to play at highly regarded Oak Ridge, the District 3-AAA champion, in opening round Region 2-AAA action this past Saturday. Maryville was slated to play at Karns, the 3-AAA runner-up.

It. Just. Keeps. Getting. Worse. Over the past few weeks, the University of Tennessee has made mistake after mistake in the eyes of the public. Some of those errors are serious in nature, others are fairly inconsequential, and others are out of their control.

But the hits, like the Led Zeppelin IV album, just keep on coming.

On February 8th, a Title IX lawsuit was filed in federal court, stating that five former Tennessee student-athletes (four football, one basketball) and one non-athlete assaulted six women (the plaintiffs in the suit), and that the University of Tennessee did not take claims seriously.

"UT administration (Chancellor Jimmy Cheek), athletic department (Vice Chancellor and Athletics

coach (Butch Jones) were personally aware (as 'appropriate persons' under Title IX) and had actual notice of previous sexual assaults and rapes by football players, yet acted with deliberate indifference to the serious risks of sexual assaults and failed to take corrective actions." Tennessee's legal counsel Bill

Ramsey responded thusly. "In the situations identified in the lawsuit filed today; the University acted lawfully and in good faith, and we expect a court to agree. Any assertion that we do not take sexual assault seriously enough is simply not true. To claim that we have allowed a culture to exist contrary to our institutional commitment to providing a safe environment for our students or that we do not support those who report sexual assault is just false."

On the morning of February 16th representative of the University is UT President Joe DiPietro gave his "State of the University" speech. He refused to comment on the Title IX lawsuit, instead deferring to the statement made by legal counsel.

"If you are affiliated with UT, there is a lot to be proud of," DiPietro said. "But, in spite of these successes, we recognize that, currently, there are many issues that are overshadowing our progress and our efforts to advance our university's mission."

This is where DiPietro needs to lead, not hide behind their lawyers.

Peyton Manning has been mentioned in that Title IX lawsuit for an incident involving a trainer back in 1996. The lawsuit goes back more than two decades, trying to hammer home the fact that Tennessee has struggled in this area for years. Having the most well known awful for both sides. Then, on the evening of February 16th, former Tennessee offensive lineman Mack Crowder was arrested on child sex charges in Florida, reportedly admitting to police that he solicited sex several times with an undercover deputy he thought was 14 years old. Crowder's final season with the Vols was in 2015. He at one time was thought of so highly that he represented Tennessee at SEC Media Davs.

On February 17th, former Tennessee lineman Cosey Coleman was arrested in Florida and charged with felony counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and battery. Coleman played on the Vols 1998 national championship team.

Those players are obviously no longer with the program. But then the evening of February 17th, Tennessee defensive lineman Alexis Johnson, a JUCO transfer that enrolled at Tennessee a month ago, was arrested and charged with aggravated assault by strangulation and false imprisonment of a woman. He was suspended from team activities by Butch Jones immediately and will reportedly plead not guilty.

So in a 24 hour period Tennessee had a recent alum, a long time alum, and a current player arrested, all on serious charges. And while all of this was going on, the silence from Butch Jones and Dave Hart has been deafening. This is when they need to say something... anything... about how Tennessee is a safe place for women, and how they teach their student-athletes to be respectful of women. Even a simple press release would be more than what they have done to date.

Jones finally spoke to the media briefly before the Tennessee/LSU basketball game on February 20th, at which the football team was scheduled to be honored for its win in the Outback Bowl. Jones said. "There's no culture problem."

Then, on February 23rd, all 16 varsity coaches spoke in a rare joint press conference. They said that the culture at Tennessee is good and many of the perceptions that have formed are inaccurate. Conspicuous in his absence was Dave Hart. UT Chancellor Jimmy Cheek wasn't there either, nor was any other UT

Versatile Bulldogs look to take next step on diamond an up-and-coming West High squad.

When Bearden High School baseball coach John Rice looks at his 2016 roster the biggest thing that sticks out is versatility.

"We have a little bit of speed and we have several guys who can play multiple positions," Rice said. "We have at least three or four guys who can consistently play three or four different positions and if you can hit, then I have to find a place to put you in the lineup. "I'm lucky to have guys who can play several positions. I've had guys who played in the outfield when they were freshmen and moved to the infield and never played in the infield

The Bulldogs, who went 22-12 in 2015 and finished second in District 4-AAA before losing to eventual Class AAA State Champion Hardin Valley Academy, have also been through the battles and are looking to draw upon their experience to achieve success this season.

Bearden plays in a league that features the likes of the Hawks, state tournament regular and 2014 champion and 2015 runner-up Farragut, Maryville, William Blount and Rice makes no bones about the fact that his Bulldogs may need a little help from Lady Luck at times this

"We're going to have to have some bounces go our way and we're going to have to stay on an even keel all season," Rice said. "We're going to have to avoid that emotional roller coaster. We just can't afford to play that way and we're going to have a little luck."

Bearden has a bevy of savvy veteran returners including: David Beam (a junior who is the reigning district player of the year. He's a top left-handed pitcher who logged 39 innings on the mound. He also plays in the outfield and first base. He hit .459 and drove in 42 runs in 2015); Bryson Ford (a senior and three-year starter. He's penciled in to start at shortstop but Rice said he can play anywhere on the diamond); Brady Duncan (senior pitcher/infielder); Brandon Trammell (junior, third baseman); Clark Poynter (junior, outfielder who can also play in the infield); Paul Underwood (senior, pitcher); Sean Walsh (senior, pitcher); Tyson Beach (senior, catcher).

Rice said that he will also rely heavily on sophomores Ross McKenry (catcher) and Thomas Wilson (pitcher/infielder). All of Bearden's returning players made significant contributions when called upon last season. They delivered timely and clutch hits. They played solid defense and came up in key spots on the mound last year. Bearden is looking to advance out of the district year but that might be a tall order with teams like the Hawks,

County, who will have a new coach this year in Adam Sullivan. Sullivan, who replaces longtime coach Jim Gaylor, comes over from Catholic where he guided the Irish to two consecutive appearances in the Class AA State Championship

Admirals and the Rebels from Blount

The Doctor is in a weekly column by Dr. Jim Ferguson

Appearances

"You look good, Dr. Ferguson," a patient recently told me. She then asked, "How do you feel?" Perhaps the latter was just a pleasantry of conversation - something we all do. None of us really expects or wants to hear about another person's aches and pains sometimes even doctors tune out.

Though English is my native language, my grade school teachers were never able to convince me of the importance of studying a language I'd already "mastered." I am more of a grammarian than I used to be. Perhaps this is why I no longer awaken in a panic having dreamed I was to be tested on the Harbrace English textbook! I did notice that my friend and patient used vernacular phrasing in complimenting me on my appearance. It would have been impolite though and downright catty to tell her she had incorrectly used the adjective good instead of the modifying adverb, well. So I just thanked her for the compliment and said, "I'm doing fine." You be the judge from the recent picture above.

A weeks ago I saw a friend who has gone through the "valley of the shadow of death" due to cancer, radiation and chemotherapy. It was her sallow complexion which told me of her journey. Doctors are trained to notice such things, but I believe all of us intuitively recognize a rosy, healthy complexion, and one that Body language is often more telling than our verbiage, at least for those of us who are sighted. The fictional Superman was said to have X-ray vision. What pubescent boy has not fantasized similarly! More telling was Jesus' ability to see into the heart of a man and his motives. I believe the Master's ability was more son's Disease. I couldn't of a fall due to weakness in

than just the honed skills of observation and more than Bobby Drinnon's skills of "seeing" through empathy.

I have two friends who lost their vision as adults and now work with young blind people to teach them the characteristic body mannerisms of the sighted. During conversation, sighted people receive nuanced information beyond words. As an example, every man knows when he's said something wrong; his wife's reaction is more telling than any vocal disapproval. My friends who are blind have learned to listen more carefully. Too often during conversation I don't listen carefully because I'm busy thinking of something to say or just trying to avoid a social faux pas. My friends amaze me with their listening skills and their conversational mannerisms as they "look" directly at me.

When I was in medical school my peers and I often played a game of observation to hone our clinical skills. In a non malicious way we would observe the public and suggest diagnoses. A more recent example is the man who almost fell on me at the Pops concert while descending stairs in the semi-darkness. His shortened, festinating (hurrying) gait, reduced arm swing and tremor led me to the diagnosis of Parkinsee his facial expression, but I'm sure it would have been masklike, as is typical in this neurodegenerative disorder.

I've always been interskills. You often need these skills in the middle of the night or in the central highlands of Guatemala where CT scans aren't available. Even non doctors draw conclusions from their observations, sometimes asking my opinion of their diagnosis.

I'm especially interested in gait issues in my geriatric patients where falling is a big problem. Gait issues are also on my mind as I watch my granddaughter Josie learn to walk. You can see her working to develop the neural connections in her cerebellum which will one day produce fluid and coordinated movements. Pathologically, stroke patients can have similar discoordinated movements and coarse shaking as Josie now manifests due to her immature brain.

This essay is not meant to make you a neurologist or even an internist who once stayed in a Holiday Inn Express. However, if you see someone unable to easily get up from a chair, especially if they must use their arms to push themselves to a standing position, you should assume these folks are at high risk their quadriceps (thigh muscles). Similarly, weakness of those muscles on the back of the thigh (hamstrings) which ease us down into a chair also raise the risk ested in clinical diagnostic of a fall. Older folks sometimes find walking painful and therefore become more sedentary. This contributes to weakening of the thigh muscles which must be resisted. Use those muscles or lose them is good advice.

> We've all seen people with "inner ear" problems who seem to veer off course. Obviously, this can be dangerous. And others with nerve damage may find it difficult to raise their feet and compensate with a high stepping gait in order to prevent tripping. Throw rugs in a home add warmth and are beautiful, but can contribute to falls in folks with muscular and neurologic disorimportant and common problem in older folks is what I call disequilibrium syndrome (dysfunction of equilibrium). Patients often report that they're unsteady or dizzy, but this is not vertigo. As we age the collection and transmission of sensory information becomes impaired. Our hearing decreases, the sense of smell and taste diminish and our vision weakens. Often many of us need bifocals later in life and sometimes trifocals.

When you first put on bifocals you understand lack of depth perception and how disconcerting and problematic this can be. Lastly, some older folks have difficulty sensing their toes, and compensate by watching where they step. People with neuropathy often lean forward to watch their step, lifting their feet higher as they walk. Watching their difficulties is even unsettling for me.

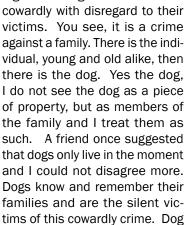

Strokes cause additional gait issues beyond just the paresis which contributes to falls. Patients may have spasticity where their toes turn inwards and scrape the floor producing excessive wear of the tips of shoes. Stoke victims may also have an inability to adequately lift the affected leg producing an audible scuffing of the floor and a visible widened compensatory swinging of the leg called circumduction. Obviously, these debilities increase the risk of Broken hips, a fractured pelvis or crushed lumbar vertebrae can be life threatening and cause misery. You've heard that appearances can be deceiving, but they can also be revealing. Let's pay attention and do a better job looking after each other and protecting the frailest among us.

Let's face it, dognapping, dog flipping, or whatever you want to call it, it's a crime. This type of crime goes further than sentimental;

cowardly with disregard to their it's emotional because there is victims. You see, it is a crime a living breathing life involved. This is a crime against a family making it super personal and emotional. The thieves see it as an easy way to make a buck at someone else's expense. Many times stolen dogs are sold to research laboratories, dog fighting rings, and puppy mills. In an HBO documentary titled "Dealing Dogs" it is estimated that there are nearly two-million companion animals stolen each year. That
