9th District school board member and candidate Amber Rountree addresses a large crowd at the South Knox Alliance candidate forum last week at Dogwood Elementary School.

The South Knox Alliance hosted a Candidate Meet and Greet last week. Candidates for Knox County Commission at-large Seats 10 and 11, Circuit Court Clerk, County Clerk, Register of Deeds and School Board were each given five minutes to discuss three questions related to the office they are seeking. Adam Fritts, SKA board member, introduced the candidates and posed the discussion questions.

Despite being the final speaker of the evening, Amber Rountree radiated enthusiasm as she discussed her accomplishments and her vision for Knox County Schools.

Amber Rountree, who currently represents the 9th District and is serving a second term as vice chair of the Knox County Board of Education, returned to Dogwood Elementary for the candidate forum. As the school board member representing the Community School, she had been there earlier in the day visiting classrooms and seeing some of the great work going on. The mother of two boys not yet in school is working on her doctorate degree in education and literacy.

The former Halls Elementary School librarian has a passion for children and education that has made her a driving force in growing great schools in Knox County. She was instrumental in the recently completed comprehensive rezoning which allows students to attend the schools closest to them. "I feel that neighborhood support is so important to our kids," she emphasized.

Rountree talked about the benefit of the community school program such as Dogwood. "This model brings services, partnerships and mentors to our school, which has contributed to our students' success."

Another recent success she mentioned has been the South-Doyle library which, thanks to a generous grant by Randy Boyd, has had a half million dollar renovation. She invited everyone who hasn't already seen it to schedule a visit. The model library has been visited by other schools in Knox County as well as those across the state.

She was a member of last year's Superintendent Search Committee along with school board members Tony Norman and Susan Horn. Rountree was happy to select Superintendent Bob Thomas, a selection which she says has brought an increased positive school culture and morale. She is also proud of the work accomplished by the educational disparity in educational outcome task force of which she was a member.

Rountree believes that there is still much to be done and said she has great plans for the future of Knox County Schools and the schools in South Knoxville. A top priority that she is currently working on with Superintendent Thomas is addressing safety and security concerns at South-Doyle High School.

Speaking about the development and expansion of the early literacy program, she said, "It's probably no surprise given my background that I believe literacy is the key to our students' academic success. When gaps in literacy skills aren't caught early, it is hard for students to close those gaps and become successful. We have a great Pre-K program here at Dogwood. I want to see this extremely successful early literacy program continue to expand throughout Knox County."

Candidates for county commission at-large seats present were Ronnie Rochelle, Larry Smith, Justin Biggs and Tori Griffin. Daniel Gerke was represented by Danny Wilhoit and Larsen Jay was represented by Scott Broyles. The candidates were asked to Questions answered at mayoral candidate debate

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

Campaign supporters and interested citizens packed the auditorium at Jewelry Television's mayoral debate Thursday.

WBIR's John Becker hosted the debate and the questions were submitted prior to the event by registered guests. Present were Republican candidates Brad Anders, Glenn Jacobs and Bob Thomas along with Democratic candidates Rhonda "Mousie" Gallman and Linda Haney. The two questions involved raising property taxes in the county and the possibility of a metro-type government in the future.

that money is "better in your pocket than in some politician's hands."

Thomas said "No" and said that the county needs to "use business sense" and look at programs that could be reduced and save money.

What about a Metro Government in Knox County?

The candidates for Knox County Mayor were asked about their opinions on creating a metro-type government between the county and city.

Haney replied she favors an eventual consolidation of the two governments and added she has lived in a metro-government area and it "works well." She also said she understands that county residents would probably oppose the idea.

Anders responded that the "county isn't set up for that" and cited the cost of it but suggested that some departments, like Parks and Recreation, might be merged.

Raise Taxes in Knox County?

Haney said the county may have to raise taxes "if we want to advance." Gallman said she might consider it but "can't promise."

Anders said he wouldn't take raising taxes "off the table" and said the county "has no margin to operate." Jacobs said "No," stating

Jacobs agreed some departments could be consolidated and said he "lives in the county and don't want it."

Thomas said he "can't imagine that" and noted that a move to metro-type government doesn't originate in the county mayor's office and "won't take a foothold." He added there's "no question of some consolidation of services."

Biggest problem in Knox County?

When asked what the biggest problem in Knox County is, Anders sited the infrastructure citing a 30-year old road plan.

Thomas cited the opioid crisis and said abusers are treated like criminals and need a chance.

Jacobs mentioned the opioid problem and said the county can't incarcerate its way out of it.

Gallman cited opioids, safety, and school safety and said "everybody is afraid."

Haney said the largest problem is the education system, safety, teachers pay and the need for drug education at an earlier age.

The candidates were also asked about neighborhood safety, pay raises for teachers, major employers in the county, TIF and PILOT financing, and requiring sidewalks in new developments.

In closing remarks Haney said she is "a proud Democrat" and asked her party members to step up and support another voice in the county.

Gallman said she was a student of politics and referred people to her Facebook campaign.

Thomas said he has more than 30 years of business experience and said he wants a better future for his children and grandchildren.

Anders cited character and leadership, adding, "Nobody on this stage has more experience in county government."

Jacobs said that while other candidates have lots of experience in government that there "may be some things they don't want you to see."

Early voting starts Wednesday

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

Early voting in Knox County begins Wednesday and the races for sheriff and county mayor seem to be driving the turnout. There are lots of other offices on the ballot, everything from commission races to non-partisan school board races.

All in all whichever party primary you vote for, the ballot is going to be a bit longer than you might expect. Early voting runs until April 26 with the county general election slated for May 1.

Registered voters in the county, which includes Farragut and Knoxville, will find the early voting locations open 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Saturdays, except for the Karn's Senior Center.

Cliff Rogers, Administrator of Elections, told The Focus that the commission hopes for 50 to 60,000 voters. He said that only about 30,000 voted four years ago but noted that there was no opponent then in the county mayor's race and the sheriff was an incumbent.

"We'd like to see more but will be happy to see the turnout doubled," he said.

Locations of the early voting include the small assembly room at the City-County Building, the Love Kitchen at 2416 Martin Luther King Jr. Ave., 1645 Downtown West Blvd Unit 34, New Harvest Park at 4775 New Harvest Lane, 4952 Clinton Highway in the Clinton Plaza, Farragut Town Hall, the Carter Library at 9036 Asheville Highway, the Halls Recreation Center at 6933 Recreation Lane, and one new location: Meridian Baptist Church South at 6513 Chapman Highway.

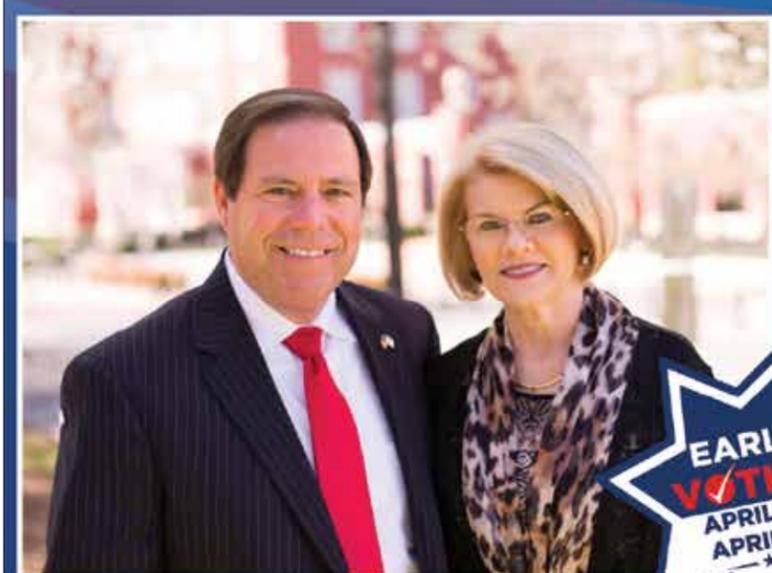

The Karns Senior Center, at 8024 Oak Ridge Highway, will not be open on Saturdays because of other events scheduled there.

discuss their plan for Knox County in this position, their plan for education and their feeling on tax credits.

Ronnie Rochelle, candidate for Seat 10, explained his vision and priorities for Knox County, "The number one thing we have got to change is that we are trying to grow the future of Knox County on a mountain of debt." If elected he vowed to reduce the debt and stay on budget allowing more funding for schools and road improvements.

R. Larry Smith, candidate for the at-large Seat 11, promised to give top priority to upholding the county charter. He pointed out Knox County is financially sound with a triple A bond rating. He is committed to adequate pay for teachers, sheriff employees and county employees. He claimed his personal relationships with city council members, county commissioners, state representatives, senators and school board members will be a great asset in open communication and interacting with budget planning.

Seat 11 commission candidate Justin Biggs emphasized the many great companies who are looking at Knox County and the importance of recruiting those businesses. He would like to update the road system, give attention to those areas of Knox County that have been overlooked and work with the school board to fund programs in early elementary school to address opioid abuse and mental health. He would like to see tax credit programs stretch out across the county.

"Economic development needs to spread throughout the county," said Tori Griffin, candidate for at-large Seat 10. "East Knox County needs some attention so it matches the rest of the county. It is important that we bring jobs that offer a livable wage. We need to think long term 10-15 years ahead." He told the crowd that he sees tax credits as okay with helping small businesses grow and develop as long as the county sees a return on the investment. These credits need to go to businesses that bring jobs and build economy.

The six Circuit Court Clerk candidates were asked their plan for Knox County if elected and their thoughts on records being accessible to the public.

Bo Bennett said he plans to do what he already does on a daily basis as director of operations for a software company specializing in software systems and efficiency for fee offices. "I have been in these offices and have learned how to make them more efficient by cutting down customer wait lines and decrease employee workloads and save a lot of money."

Scott Smith sees the election for Circuit Court Clerk as the hiring of a business manager who can take care of dozens of employees and the need for someone who will be comfortable managing and who understands HR issues. He would like to digitize the office for instant information when cases are delayed so that those involved will be notified.

Candidate Sheri Ridgeway is experienced in helping families and children in the Juvenile Court system and wants to bring that experience to Knox County. She believes that excellent communication and customer service are a priority for the office.

Tim Wheeler believes that his experience as deputy clerk and chief deputy clerk sets him apart from the other candidates. One of his top goals would be to work within the budget and turn over excess fees to the Knox County general fund as other fee based offices have.

Don Ridings believes his 36 years as a business owner overseeing budgets and staff as well as his background in IT make him the best candidate for Circuit Court Clerk. He would like to see technology changes that would give customers, judges, attorneys and the public the ability to file online while also retaining the ability to file in paper for those who do not use or have access to the internet.

Both candidates for County Clerk were asked to discuss their plan for the county, and technology and accessibility of public records.

Roger Kane was in Nashville on legislative business. John King spoke on his behalf: "If elected as Knox County Clerk, Roger's plan would include a top to bottom review of the programs offered to see where technology and customer service practices need to be enhanced or improved and seek the staff for advice on how improvements should be made. As a business leader he knows the significance of great customer service. He would like to see the option for vehicle registration to be renewed every two years which would save customers time and possibly some money."

Candidate Sherry Witt's plans for Knox County include building a team of professionals with advanced knowledge of laws of Tennessee Code annotated and the Knox County Charter and finding the best balance and blend of innovative technology to advance the services offered by this office.

Candidate for Register of Deeds Nick McBride has served as the Chief Deputy to the Register for over ten years. He explained the role and function of the office that maintains records such as property deeds and Military Discharge records. If elected, he promises to continue advances in modernization of the office, and to safeguard, protect and maintain dependable off-site backup of our vital documents.

Candidate Kristi Kristy faces incumbent Amber Rountree in the race for the 9th District seat on the board of education. She listed her experiences as a mother and volunteer in the schools where her children attended. She shared her concern for a declining graduation rate despite an increase in ACT scores, the need for career and technology programs in the schools and the need for more counselors and social workers in the schools.

The candidates gave plenty for voters to think about as they go to the polls. Early voting is April 11 through April 26. Election Day is May 1.

Ethics Committee Witch-Hunt Outrageous

By Steve Hunley,
Publisher
 publisher@knoxfocus.com

refused to cooperate with the thorough investigation completed by Law Director Bud Armstrong's office.

At the heart of this complaint lies political motivation, something Bo Bennett denies. Yet Bennett was defeated in a bid for the Knox County Commission four years ago by Charles Busler and is off and running for Circuit Court Clerk this year. Bob Thomas is a candidate for Knox County mayor in the Republican primary on May 1. It takes little imagination and even less credulity to deduce the charges are politically motivated, nor would it be the first time ethics complaints were filed for political reasons. Bennett's complaint barely reaches the level of "hearsay" evidence, as the source was the original story in the Knoxville News Sentinel. If you are dizzy by this point, it is precisely because this is as circular as a bowling ball.

The hearing by the Knox County Ethics Committee last week was little more than a travesty of justice. Chairman Jonathan Cooper seemed to be anything but fair and impartial, only begrudgingly giving attorneys representing Thomas a continuance, a courtesy routinely granted by every court in the land when sought the first time. As Cooper is himself an attorney, it is hardly a concept that could be foreign to him. It is surpassingly curious that the date selected by Cooper for the hearing, April 13, was precisely the one day when Thomas's attorney had a full schedule of court appearances.

There are provisions which are supposed to protect people when an ethics complaint is filed - - - the nine member panel must vote unanimously to find an ethics violation and all nine must be present for the vote. Apparently Jonathan Cooper finds that language ambiguous or simply doesn't care. There is a rush to come to some kind of finding before the May 1 primary. Is there any reason the ethics committee could not have a full hearing and come to a finding on any date after the May 1 primary election? Apparently not, which raises the notion the ethics committee is being used for a political witch-hunt to injure candidates inside the primary.

This is not the first time an ethics body has been used for political purposes and sadly, it likely will not be the last. The most fundamental aspect of American justice is the right of any person accused of either an infraction of the law or a serious crime is to be represented by competent legal counsel and face his or her accuser. The very idea Bo Bennett is merely a good Samaritan pushing a complaint solely out of his righteous conviction is utterly preposterous. Perhaps the only thing more preposterous is the fact the complaint is manufactured through a story appearing in the Knoxville News Sentinel.

Clearly Jonathan Cooper and some members of the ethics committee care little about even the appearance of fairness and impartiality. That alone is cause enough for concern considering just what an ethics committee should be; the rush to judgment before the primary election reveals something at the very least slightly disturbing. This hearing is not about right or wrong; it is not about fairness, nor is it really determining whether there has been an actual ethics violation. It is about allowing the Knoxville News Sentinel to construct its own series of events based not on facts, but to push its own narrative. The Sentinel has done the very same thing with Mayor Tim Burchett recently. Is there any objective person in Knox County who believes the editor of the News Sentinel hasn't carried out a shameless vendetta against Burchett in the pages of the daily newspaper?

The series of articles appearing in the Sentinel about the county's ambulance contract, the gold tournament and Bob Thomas and Charles Busler have rearranged facts, completely ignored other facts, and pushed a narrative, to put it kindly, that simply isn't true. Clearly, the Sentinel hopes to affect the outcome of the ethics committee hearing. Evidently that strategy has worked with Jonathan Cooper. Whether the other members of the ethics committee will allow themselves to be influenced remains to be seen.

When a community's ethics committee allows itself to be swayed so easily and again - - - the only "evidence" is a story appearing in the Knoxville News Sentinel - - - it raises the question of justice having been circumvented, if not downright perverted. It raises the question of the constitutional rights of individuals having been trampled. The county commission clearly needs to pay more attention to the quality of people selected to serve on the ethics committee, people of integrity and ability, who are immune to popular opinion and coverage by local news media. Like Caesar's wife, the ethics committee should be above reproach. Otherwise it will not mete out justice, but retribution for someone else's political gain.

Potential Knoxville veterans hospital in limbo, other services available

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

While it appears a veterans hospital for Knoxville is in limbo there are several other services available to veterans and their families in our area.

Back in July of 2016 Congressman John Duncan said he was working on the possibility of a Veterans Hospital in Knoxville with the idea, then, of possibly using the former St. Mary's Hospital on Broadway. Since then Tennova has announced it is not building a new hospital in West Knoxville and plans to keep the old St. Mary's facility.

The Knoxville Focus asked Congressman Duncan's office if he is still hoping to get a VA hospital for Knoxville. Currently veterans must drive to Johnson City to the Jimmy Quillian VA facility there for any medical service other than basic walk-in care at the Tallent Center near West Town Mall.

Duncan's Deputy Chief of Staff Don Walker told The Focus recently that the congressman met with the VA last summer and said a veteran's hospital here "is not an if, it's a when" for our area.

"We're looking for a better place and have a commitment from the VA to do something," Walker said.

Knox County Veteran Service Officer Tom Humphries says his office provides help to veterans for various programs. Those include compensation for service connected disabilities, pension programs for housebound aid and attendance, health benefits enrollment, burial benefits including flags, headstones, markers and military honors, vocational habitation and dependents education assistance and notices of disagreements and denial of claims.

The Veterans Service Office visits various community centers to help veterans. A representative will be at the O'Connor Center on April 9th at 10 a.m., Corryton on April 10th at 10 a.m., Strang Center on April 12th at 11 a.m. The Powell Center will be visited on April 17th, Halls on April 18th, South Knoxville on April 19th, Karns on April 29th, the VA Outpatient Clinic on April 24th and Carter on April 25th.

You can call the Knox County Office at (865) 215-5645 or email them at veterans@knoxcounty.org or find the Veterans Service Office online at www.knoxcounty.org/veterans/.

The office is open Monday through Friday from 7:30 until 4:30 and is located at 1000 North Central Street in the former Sears Building.

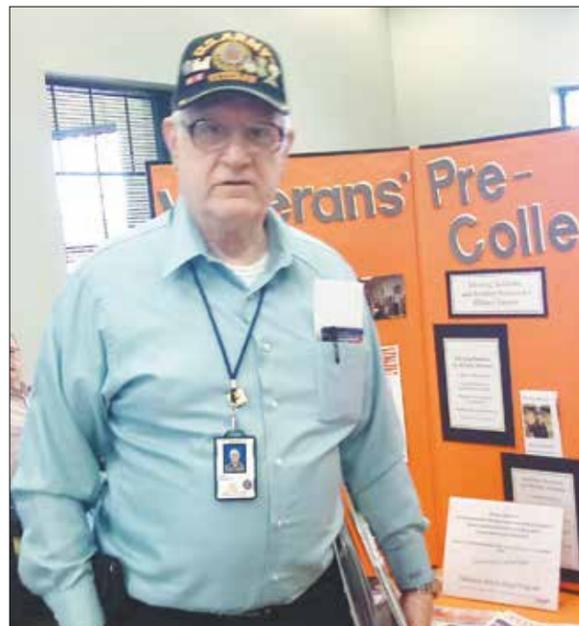

Other organizations available to veterans in our area include the Vietnam

Veterans of America, the Wounded Warrior Project, Veterans of Foreign Wars, AmVets, Operation Home Front, Knoxville Veterans Center, Women Veterans, VA's Tallent Center, American Legion, East Tennessee Military Council, Fleet Reserve Association, Stand Down, and Rolling Thunder. You can find these organizations and others on the internet and on Facebook.

Ethics committee could affect Republican Primary

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

In a decision that could well affect the upcoming Republican Primary for Knox County mayor, the chairman of the Knox County Ethics Committee has set this Friday for the hearing on a complaint against Commissioners Bob Thomas and Charles Busler.

Ethics Chairman Jonathan Cooper, an attorney, and Thomas' attorney Marcos Garza confronted each other during Wednesday's committee meeting. Garza said that the notice for the public meeting last week stated the event was a "scheduling meeting" and not advertising as a hearing. He said that he and Busler's attorney were not ready to present their clients' case and asked that the hearing be scheduled in late June or late May, following the May 1 Republican Primary.

Thomas, a candidate for Knox County mayor, was named in a complaint by Richard "Bo" Bennett, who had been an opponent of Busler for a county commission seat in 2014. Law Director Richard "Bud" Armstrong reported to the ethics committee back in March on Bennett's charges and that he found no violation of the code of ethics. Bennett had charged that both men had benefited financially from playing in a News-Sentinel golf match on the Premier Ambulance team and Bennett charged that both Thomas and Busler had voted against extending Rural/Metro AMR's ambulance contract with the county.

The law director ruled that since Bennett had not witnessed the event and would not name witnesses that the charge was groundless.

Nevertheless Chairman Cooper last month proceeded to call a meeting of the ethics group and request that Thomas and Busler be present with legal representation. Neither commissioner appeared and Busler's attorney was out of town on other legal matters Wednesday morning.

Cooper went into detail about the charges and the committee's obligation. After 90 minutes of discourse between him and Garza, Cooper began asking ethics members who would be available and chose the April 13th date. He invoked his powers as chair to set the date and no vote was taken by the other members.

When Garza informed the committee that he had other legal cases scheduled that day, Cooper suggested that he assign other attorneys in his firm to handle those and said that Garza was presenting "vague assertions" in order to delay the hearing.

Garza again asked for the hearing to be held May 31 saying that Friday, April 13 was "unreasonable to me."

Cooper told Garza to "arrange your other court dates."

Garza said that neither Thomas nor Busler were attending because it was thought the meeting was to schedule the hearing. He said that getting a continuance was normal in a court of law. Cooper responded, "We're not in a court of law." He said continuing the hearing was inconvenient for the 12 ethics members.

"You've only had 30 days to prepare," Schoonmaker said, adding "The attorneys are here trying to do the right thing for their clients." Schoonmaker's remark was chided by committee member Barbara Chandler. She said was "not impressed" with Garza's requests.

Ethics member Michael Covington said there was a "dogged determination to find out more with a full blown hearing."

Member Jennifer Roche said it was obvious that the attorneys were not ready and the parties in the complaint were not present.

Committee member Billy Stevens said that the matter should be "resolved as soon as possible to protect the election process."

"I'm not trying to rush their decision, it's difficult for me," Cooper said but added, "There will be no further continuance without good reason."

Cooper then summarized what should happen during the hearing, noting that the complainant has the burden of proof, testimony will be under oath, evidence may be presented but the chair can rule some evidence inadmissible, and the ethics members may question witnesses.

Any decision reached by the ethics committee must be unanimous but Cooper said that members who have not heard all the evidence cannot vote. He also ruled that "unanimous" means a quorum of members if a few are absent.

Plans made to preserve scenic Governor John Sevier Highway

By Pete Gawda

Another step was taken Thursday evening, April 5 toward the preservation of scenic Governor John Sevier Highway (JSH) with a meeting of the stakeholders committee. The highway, designated State Route 168, runs through southern and eastern Knox County from Alcoa Highway to Asheville Highway.

Since 1971 the JSH has been designated as part of the State of Tennessee's Scenic Highways. However, this program only regulates building height, signage and junkyards within 1,000 and 2,000 feet of the highway. Concerns about population growth, traffic and development along the JSH corridor led the Knoxville-Knox County Metropolitan Planning Commission to begin studying the highway in June of 2017. As a result an 18-member stakeholder committee, led by Knox County Commissioner Carson Dailey, was formed. Since its formation the committee has met several times to discuss challenges to the JSH corridor.

The purpose of the April 5 meeting was to review comments from more than 70 people who attended a public meeting on the JSH corridor on March 4, according to MPC staff member Liz Albertson, who moderated the meeting.

Dailey asserted that the purpose of the stakeholders committee was not to stop development along the JSH corridor but to encourage quality development. "We are growing in the right way," he said.

The number one concern expressed by the public was protection of trees along the JSH. Albertson said that currently there are few, if any, landscaping requirements. Tree protection is not required. Another major concern

Five companies and individuals were honored recently at the annual "Equity Awards" breakfast. The city recognized partners and projects that feature fair and affordable housing, job creation, and access and inclusion for persons with disabilities.

Mayor Madeline Rogero said the city "remains committed to fair housing principals, prohibiting discrimination concerning the sale, rental or financing of housing based on race, religion, national origin, familiar status, color, disability or sex."

She said those honored are exemplary for their positive effects on their neighborhoods and the entire city.

City funding of projects, as low-interest forgivable loans, comes from federal funding. Projects qualifying must meet specific rules like creating projects that comply with Housing and Urban Development rules and the hiring of local people in the creation of new jobs.

Michael Haynes Construction was honored for contributing high-quality rental homes, four of which were in the Lonsdale Community on lots purchased through the city's Someday several years from now you will be able to walk or bike from Fountain City all the way downtown. It's years away but plans are certainly in the works.

In the interim the First Creek Greenway is, step by step, inching its way north. Last week Mayor Madeline Rogero and others cut the ribbon to officially open the new path connecting Fulton High School at Woodland Avenue to Edgewood Park. The new trail connection, across Broadway, adds a scenic bridge over First Creek and opening access on the paved path to hundreds of North Knoxville homes to the North Knoxville Library, the Larry Cox Senior Center and Broadway Shopping Center.

Tim Hester, Parks and Greenway Coordinator, told The Focus that plans are underway to link up the Adair Park Greenway to Old Broadway where the path will run along the creek there beside the Lynnwood Cemetery. Currently plans call for that part of the greenway to link up with the future extension of the Fountain City greenway at Old Broadway.

Hester said the next step on the First Creek Greenway project is to connect the North and South portions of the current greenway and then move north to eventually link with the Adair Park and Fountain City greenways.

The new connection was funded by $1.4 million from two federal grants through the state and the Knoxville Regional Transportation Planning Organization. The city put $406,000 in the project. The new trail segment, just over ½ miles long, contributes to the current 112 miles of paved greenways and trails in the city.

Easter Bonnet

My, how times change. I haven't heard the song "In Your Easter Bonnet" in years. A lifetime ago, children sang it in school and companies included it in their marketing strategies. Other things during Easter are much different as well.

My brothers and I always got a little excited as Easter approached. We knew that Mother would take us downtown to shop. At least a new pair of pants and maybe one of our two pairs of shoes for the year were purchased then.

By Joe Rector
joerector@comcast.net

On Easter morning, we put our clothes on and went outside for family pictures. Daddy wore his suit, something much different from the daily work clothes he wore. Mother wore a dress she'd made for the occasion. We'd been to Cooper and Baldwin's barbershop in Lonsdale on Saturday to make sure our hair was cut in short flat tops. Daddy always said he didn't want to see us with long hair or dirty shoes, so by Easter morning, our scalps shone through G.I. type buzzes and our shoes did as well after a fresh coat of polish and a good brushing.

We rode the short distance to church and attended Sunday School. All of our friends were dressed in their new clothes as well. Girls wore crinolines under dresses of yellow, baby blue or white. Their hands were covered in white gloves. Boys sometimes wore sport coats, but most often, they suffered with dress shirts buttoned at the neck so that clip-on ties could be attached. Easter was the one day when all of us looked cute, no matter how uncomfortable we felt or how bad we appeared the rest of the year.

When we returned home, several rounds of Easter egg hunting took place until Sunday dinner was ready. We stayed in the house until a parent or our older brother hid the eggs and then burst through the door to look all over our large yard for them. Without fail, one or two eggs remained hidden until a lawn mower shredded them in the summer and spewed a foul smell everywhere.

Mother refrigerated the colored eggs, and we boys ate a few. Then she'd take several and make egg salad for sandwiches for school lunch. At some point, Easter eggs with battered and shattered shells were thrown upon the scrap pile in the back yard. Baskets and the fake grass were put in the attic to wait until the next holiday.

These days, lots of folks don't attend Easter church services. Their children have new clothes and shoes throughout the year, so the excitement of having new outfits is gone. Families still take the opportunity to gather for a meal and visiting. Some children hunt eggs on Sunday, although many attend large egg hunting events on the Saturday before and are tired of the activity by the time Easter arrives. Baskets are bought but not saved for the next year.

I miss those old days when Easter brought so much excitement. The smell of vinegar in the kitchen on Saturday night as we colored eggs and dyed-stained fingertips on Sunday morning still remain vivid memories. Hunting eggs with Jim and Dal brings a smile, and the whole family sitting at that round kitchen table to share a meal sometimes makes me long for those old days. The good thing is that because of the resurrection of Christ, I have a chance to reunite someday with all those who have passed. For the time being, I'll enjoy my wonderful life with Amy and my children and other family members, and I'll give thanks for it.

was to keep farms and open space along the JSH. Citizens also expressed a need to provide standards for the look of new buildings. Albertson said that currently there is no design guidance for the facades of new buildings.

Concern was also expressed about traffic safety. It was noted that future plans call for the widening of the JSH from Alcoa Highway to Chapman Highway. It was also suggested that a property and business owners association be formed. The public expressed concern for protection of historic areas. To emphasize the historical significance of the corridor the meeting was held in the 1794 Ramsey House, the home of prominent early settler Francis Alexander Ramsey, which is located just off the JSH on Thorngrove Pike. Concern was also expressed for new standards for signage along the corridor.

The next step in the preservation process, according to Albertson, could be to hold another public meeting to inform the public of possible actions, then develop recommendations and conduct workshops with the MPC and county commission to refine proposed regulations with the view of the MPC making recommendations to the county commission for their approval.

Those wishing more information about the JSH corridor or wishing to submit comments should contact Albertson at the MPC by emailing liz.albertson@knoxmpc.org or calling 865-215-3804.

The stakeholder committee consists of Terry Barnwell, Mike Brown, Jim Buckenmyer, Carson Dailey, Art Dyer, Bob Dykes, Joyce Feld, John Gammon, Tim Graham, Buddy Gregory, Cherry Johnson, Mike Todd, D.J. Pages from the Past

From 1931 until 1947, the Republican Party had suffered shattering defeats largely brought on by the Great Depression. Following the 1936 election, where GOP presidential candidate Alf Landon only won the electoral votes of Vermont and Maine, Republicans in the House of Representatives constituted only 88 members.

Throughout the decade of the 1920s, Republicans had enjoyed healthy majorities in both houses of Congress, which had been progressively thinned out until the Democrats controlled both the House of Representatives and the United States Senate. The last Republican Speaker of the House had been Nicholas Longworth of Ohio. A highly personally popular Congressman, Nick Longworth was known for his marriage to Alice Roosevelt, the tart-tongued eldest child of the late President Theodore Roosevelt. Longworth, bald, mustachioed and an accomplished violinist, was also known for his sense of fun. Longworth had died suddenly in 1931 and due to the deaths of several other GOP congressmen and a series of special elections won by Democrats, John Nance Garner of Texas became Speaker of the House.

Not until 1947 would the Republican reclaim a majority in the House of Representatives. From 1931 until 1995, the GOP only managed to retain a majority of Congress twice and then only for two years each time. Joseph W. Martin was the Republican leader in Congress from 1939 until 1959. At the time of his death, one obituary writer commented that Joe Martin had "one of the blackest scowls and brightest smiles in Congress."

That same author pointed out something rather curious about Joe Martin's long Congressional career: "Yet despite his acknowledged political abilities and leadership, Representative Martin never had his name on an important piece of legislation; never made a memorable speech; never achieved the fame or public affection of his Democratic counterpart, Sam Rayburn of Texas." Joseph W. Martin was a diminutive, rather dumpy little fellow who had first been elected to Congress in 1924, after climbing the political ladder in his native North Attleboro, Massachusetts. Martin worked very hard throughout his life; he had been a good enough athlete to play for a semiprofessional baseball team and earned the princely sum of $10 per game. He was still only a lad when he began working for the North Attleboro Evening Chronicle as a delivery boy. Over time, Martin would become the editor and finally the publisher of the newspaper. Martin was offered a scholarship to Dartmouth College, but preferred to remain at the Evening Chronicle, as he helped his parents put his brothers through school. Earning $10 a week as an employee of the paper, he saved his money and bought the Evening Chronicle, which he kept for the rest of his life. By 1912, Martin had been elected to serve in the Massachusetts House of Representatives and won a promotion two years later to the State Senate. Joe Martin chose not to run again in 1916.

Martin had been out of office for eight years when he challenged eighty-three year-old incumbent in the Republican primary and won. Joe Martin would remain in Congress for more than forty years. Martin worked his way up through the GOP ranks and when Republican leader Bertram Snell of New York retired in 1938, Joe Martin was selected to succeed him. The 1938 elections had improved the fortunes of House Republicans, as they had won 72 seats in that fall.

Congressman Martin was, as might be expected, largely opposed to Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, but he demonstrated considerable ability in working with the majority Democrats when necessary. Long marginalized, Martin helped to forge an alliance with conservative Southern Democrats, which gave both a voice in the House and made that voting bloc a force to be reckoned with. Martin's own voting record was hardly reactionary, as he had voted for the Social Security legislation, although he was deeply opposed to the Tennessee Valley Authority. In 1940, Joe Martin assumed the Chairmanship of the Republican National Committee, at the request of GOP presidential nominee Wendell Willkie. It was an experience that somewhat dismayed the little man from Massachusetts, having been a rock-ribbed Republican all his life, especially as Willkie had been a Democrat for the most of his own life. Willkie ran much better than had the previous two Republican presidential nominees, Herbert Hoover and Alf Landon, but still lost decisively to Franklin Roosevelt, despite some resistance to FDR seeking a third term.

Martin got some unwanted attention during that campaign when President Roosevelt made a famous speech excoriating the GOP, repeatedly using the phrase, "Martin, Barton and Fish," three Republican congressmen, that was highly effective.

FROM THE AUTHOR'S PERSONAL COLLECTION

The 1942 midterm elections reduced the number of Democrats in Congress even further and Joe Martin's coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats grew more powerful. Martin was quite friendly with his counterpart, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn. The two were warm personal friends.

After losing another election in 1944 to Franklin Roosevelt, the GOP made a spectacular comeback in 1946, running on the slogan of "Had Enough?" It was a reference to the deprivations suffered by Americans throughout World War II. Shortages of meat, butter, tires, women's stockings and many other items vexed Americans and President Harry Truman was unpopular. 1946 was one of those rare tidal wave elections and the GOP gained control of both the House of Representatives and the United States Senate.

Joe Martin was elected Speaker of the House by his Republican colleagues, ousting Sam Rayburn. As the 1948 elections approached, Republicans were utterly confident of holding their majorities in Congress, as well as electing New York governor Thomas E. Dewey president. Nobody seemed more confident than Dewey himself and while he had run a good race against that champion vote-getter, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Dewey did not wage a hard hitting campaign. Rather, Dewey campaigned almost as if he were an incumbent. Speaker Martin accompanied Dewey on several of the nominee's trips across the country and it was Martin's elderly mother who surprised everyone by scolding the governor about his campaign strategy. Mrs. Martin told a surprised Thomas E. Dewey he could not merely assume he was as good as elected. The outspoken old woman informed Governor Dewey he was far too complacent. Her prediction proved to be all too accurate. The scrappy little man from Missouri waged the kind of campaign Dewey himself should have run and won the election, much to the surprise of almost everyone. Even more shocking, the Democrats won back control of both houses of Congress. Joe Martin would have to surrender the Speaker's gavel back to Sam Rayburn.

Things would change again in 1952 when the hugely popular Dwight D. Eisenhower won the GOP presidential nomination in a bitter contest with "Mr. Republican," Ohio Senator Robert Alphonso Taft. Taft had competed for the Republican presidential nomination twice before and lost. Many Republicans realized it was Taft's last chance to seek the presidency and despite being a sentimental favorite of many delegates, even more believed Eisenhower could bring them victory. Unfortunately, Taft was not destined to live much longer, dying of cancer the following year.

General Eisenhower's personal popularity enabled him to make inroads in some Southern states; he carried Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and Florida. With Eisenhower's election, the House and Senate reverted back to GOP control. Once again, Joe Martin was elected Speaker of the House.

Yet again, it was but a brief interlude. The 1954 elections reversed Republican fortunes and Martin had to vacate the Speaker's chair for Sam Rayburn. The Texan was magnanimous to Martin and pointed out they had switched offices so frequently that perhaps Martin should continue to occupy the Speaker's sumptuous suite of offices in case they had to move once again. For the rest of his time as Republican leader, Joe Martin occupied the Speaker's office, irrespective of whether he actually was the Speaker of the House.

Joe Martin had done everything he possibly could to advance President Eisenhower's legislative agenda in the House, unlike many Republican senators who surprised the former general by opposing many of his initiatives. Had it not been for the frequent cooperation of Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson, Ike would have had a very difficult time getting anything done.

Joe Martin's political undoing was the 1958 elections. Off year elections are historically hard on the party in power and the United States had sunk into a deep recession, making it much more difficult for Republican incumbents that year. The 1958 elections was a disaster for the GOP. Republicans lost thirteen seats in the U. S. Senate; just a year later, the Democrats would win three of the four Senate races for the newly admitted states of Alaska and Hawaii. The debacle in the House of Representatives was little better, as the Republicans lost forty-eight seats. The defeat was staggering for the GOP.

Disgruntled Republicans who had been fortunate enough to survive the 1958 elections were rumbling louder about replacing Joe Martin as the GOP leader in the House. At first, Martin foolishly dismissed the rumblings as just a few unhappy young congressmen. The burgeoning revolt was actually spearheaded by Indiana Congressman Charles Halleck, the Minority Whip in the House. Halleck had considered challenging Joe Martin for the top spot at least a couple of times before, but could not get past President Eisenhower, who did not look favorably upon deposing Martin.

Halleck gave a quiet dinner for three White House aides and casually brought up the topic of replacing Joe Martin as Republican leader. None of the three were ready to say the president would support removing Martin. Just a few days later, the situation changed. Apparently surprised by the scope of the Republican defeat, President Eisenhower made it clear to Charles Halleck he would not take part in any contest for the Republican leadership in the House of Representatives. Without the active or tacit support of Eisenhower, Joe Martin was vulnerable.

Halleck beat Joe Martin and a dejected and surprised Martin left the Republican caucus depressed.

A bachelor his entire life, Joe Martin neither drank alcohol, smoked or even danced. According to the late Doorkeeper of the House, William "Fishbait" Miller, Martin "didn't do anything." Serving in Congress was pretty much the sum total of Joe Martin's life.

Following his defeat by Halleck, Joe Martin was something of a lonely and pitiful figure. While still a member of Congress, Martin was bereft of the power he had once exercised as Speaker and Republican leader. For the rest of his Congressional career, Joe Martin was relegated to the sidelines.

Martin contented himself by penning a lively and entertaining autobiography entitled, My First Fifty Years In Politics. Congressman Martin remained somewhat bitter about the lack of support he had received from President Eisenhower in losing his leadership position.

Charlie Halleck would suffer an almost identical fate to that of Joe Martin. After the Republicans lost the 1964 elections, a group of young congressmen would support Congressman Gerald Ford of Michigan and topple him from his leadership role.

Yet there was one final bitter disappointment awaiting Joe Martin.

Past eighty, in precarious health, Congressman Joe Martin was challenged in the 1966 Republican primary by Margaret Heckler. Mrs. Heckler, a perky redhead, was a very attractive candidate and had served on the governor's Council in Massachusetts. Forty-six years younger than Congressman Martin at the time, Mrs. Heckler radiated youth and vigor. Martin, realizing he was in trouble, announced if elected, it would be his last term in office. Although Martin was no mossback, Mrs. Heckler was not only more modern, but also more liberal. The challenger effectively used press clipping gleaned from Joe Martin's own first race against an eighty-three year-old opponent. There were accusations Martin was in ill health and was spending more time in Florida than in Washington, D. C.

It was a hard fought campaign and while Joe Martin struggled, in the end, he lost.

Ironically, Congresswoman Heckler would be confronted by a more progressive opponent herself when she was redistricted into a district with Congressman Barney Frank. Heckler would lose that race and go on to serve in the Cabinet of President Ronald Reagan.

After losing his seat in Congress, Joe Martin's health continued to deteriorate and he lived just over a year after leaving Congress. Joe Martin died on March 6, 1968.

Powell looking for a head football coach again

By Steve Williams

Hiring a head coach who could give Powell High's football program stability was a key objective when Rodney Ellison was given the reins in 2015. He became the school's fifth head coach in five years.

"We really do look for Coach Ellison to come in and establish a strong foundation for our program and build on that over the course of time," said Brad Carr, then Powell's athletic director.

Ellison hoped to provide that stability.

But the PHS program began another coaching search last week when principal Dr. Chad Smith accepted Ellison's resignation April 2.

"I want to personally say thank you to Coach Ellison for his time and effort in what has been a difficult rebuilding of the Powell High School program," said Dr. Smith in a statement.

After going 1-9 in 2015 and 2-9 in 2016, Powell got off to a 5-1 start last fall, including a 26-15 road win over rival Halls in its season opener.

Ellison's Panthers also blanked Clinton 17-0 in Week 5 for their first shutout in four years and clawed Lenoir City 42-22 in Week 6.

But Powell finished with a four-game losing streak and ended up in fifth place with a 2-4 record in Region 3-5A, missing the playoffs.

"After some thought and careful consideration, I have resigned my position as head football coach at Powell High School," said Ellison in a statement last Wednesday. "I have enjoyed my time as the head football coach and feel that our staff along with the hard work of each young man that came through this program in the past three years has brought Powell Panther football back into a respectable competitive program.

"With all the experience returning I feel that next year these kids will do some great things on the field.

"I want to thank everyone that supported our program the past three years and the administration at Powell for granting me the opportunity to lead these young men.

"Most importantly I want to thank every young man that played and worked so hard for me. I will never forget them and will always cherish the memories."

Ellison, 39, will remain on the Powell faculty as a teacher.

Ellison began coaching on the high school level in 2006 as an assistant at Bearden and worked his way up. He was head coach and offensive coordinator at Wartburg Central in 2011 and offensive coordinator three seasons at Clinton (2012-14).

Childress expects schools to 'turn a negative into a positive'

(Part 2 of an interview with TSSAA Executive Director Bernard Childress)

By Steve Williams

In what is believed to be an unprecedented move, the TSSAA Board of Control in February left the door open for Austin-East and Chattanooga Brainerd boys' basketball programs to take the steps to have their postseason bans reduced from two years to one year.

"Our staff left the Board meeting that day feeling good about the decision the Board made," recalled TSSAA Executive Director Bernard Childress at this year's state tourney in Murfreesboro.

"For the first time, the Board gave schools the opportunity to implement things to create a positive culture and come back and show they had done those things and see if the Board would reconsider.

"It's the first time to my knowledge that the Board has done that."

Austin-East and Brainerd were banned from this year's state tournament after being involved in what some called a "brawl" that broke out in their game in Chattanooga on Jan. 27. At the time, A-E was ranked No. 2 in the state in Class AA in the AP poll and Brainerd No. 5.

After unsportsmanlike conduct occurred on the floor, some spectators came on the court and reportedly made the incident worse. Game officials stopped play with 2:20 left in the first half and Brainerd

Bearden outlasts HVA and Gallatin after finding scoring touch

By Ken Lay

It's taken a little time but it seems that the Bearden High School boys soccer team has finally located its shooting touch.

The Bulldogs, who opened their 2018 campaign on March 20, were shut out in their first two matches as they fell to Science Hill (1-0) and Greeneville (3-0). But Bearden picked up a 4-0 win over Maryville to close out the month of March.

April has been a bit more productive for the Bulldogs --- at least early. Bearden opened the month with a 3-1 victory over Hardin Valley Academy Tuesday night at Turner-Allender Field.

"This is a young team," Bulldogs coach Ryan Radcliffe said after his squad defeated the Hawks, their one-time District 4-AAA rivals. "We did a little better finishing tonight, but we didn't finish some chances and we left a lot of opportunities on the board.

"Hardin Valley is a good team and this is [still] a rivalry game and this was a good test for us. We played really well and we did a better job finishing, but we did leave a lot of stuff out there."

The Bulldogs and Hawks (3-2-3) were embroiled in a fairly even battle out of the gate but Bearden seized the momentum when junior Collin Lewis buried a direct free kick past HVA goalkeeper Ryan Hart in the 23rd minute.

"We came out early and built on the momentum that we had against Maryville [on the road on March 29]," Radcliffe said.

The game's first marker appeared to zap the Hawks.

"I thought early that things were pretty even," Hardin Valley coach Nick Bradford said. "After they got that first goal, they got some energy. We were shell-shocked by that goal."

Bearden expanded its advantage to 2-0 approximately a minute later when Tanner Whited, another junior, tallied an unassisted marker.

The Hawks missed a golden scoring chance late in the opening half when Bearden senior netminder Andrew Wilkins slammed the door on Hardin Valley's Angel Garcia Perez when he stopped a point-blank shot in the 32nd minute.

Garcia Perez would eventually score in the match. He scored on a direct free kick in the 47th minute to pull the Hawks to within 2-1.

Lewis closed out the scoring with a marker in the 75th minute. Everett Houser was credited with an assist on the final goal of the match.

Bearden continued to manufacture offense Thursday night. The Bulldogs knocked off the Gallatin Greenwave 3-1 in the opening game of the Bearden Invitational.

Bearden (3-2) headed into the weekend on a three-game winning streak.

Commandos withstand early rush, down CAK 3-1

By Ken Lay

Christian Academy of Knoxville's boys soccer team manufactured some scoring chances early in its match Thursday night.

The Warriors, however, couldn't finish anything in the first half and Hendersonville was more than happy to make CAK pay as the Commandos nabbed a 3-1 victory in the opening round of the 2018 Bearden Invitational at Turner-Allender Field.

The Warriors (2-3-1) had some early chances but Hendersonville sophomore goalkeeper Andrew Briley made some key early stops to keep CAK off the scoreboard.

"We had some chances during the first 20 minutes. We couldn't finish and they really flipped things on us," Warriors coach Jon Day said. "They got us in some compromising positions and we made some silly mistakes.

"The biggest difference between the first half and the second half was our adjustments to their pressure."

The Commandos (6-1-1) scored first in the match when Isaiah Ireton converted a penalty kick after the Warriors were whistled for a foul inside the box approximately midway through the opening half.

Hendersonville, which made the long trip to Knoxville Thursday morning, seized control of the match when CAK scored an own goal in the 29th minute. The marker was officially credited to Cade Good, of the Commandos, and made the score 2-0.

And Hendersonville wasn't finished.

The Commandos expanded their advantage to 3-0 when Kyle Peterson tallied in the 36th minute to give Hendersonville the 3-0 lead that it enjoyed at halftime. The Commandos boast a talented but young roster. Its key players on this night (Ireton, Good and Briley are all sophomores) but the team held its composure during CAK's initial attacking run.

"We traveled over here [from Middle Tennessee] today, and when you do that, it takes awhile for you to get your legs," Commandos coach Russ Plummer said. "This is a great tournament and we come here to for the great competition.

"Coach Day does a great job with his team and Bearden does a great job running this tournament. Our kids did a great job weathering and withstanding that early storm and they deserve all the credit for doing that."

CAK got on the board when senior Baker Benfield scored in the 65th minute.

Meanwhile, Warriors goalkeeper Matt Messchendorf made some big saves after halftime and gave CAK a chance to fight their way back into the match.

Ireton, who tallied the first marker of the match, closed out the scoring with a goal inside the final moment of the game.

Tournament play continued through Sunday but results were unavailable at press time.

There were three tournament games Thursday night with the Commandos, the host Bulldogs and Greeneville, the defending Class AA State Champion, all notched 3-1 wins. Bearden knocked off Gallatin and the Greene Devils toppled Germantown Houston in a battle of defending state champs. The Mustangs claimed the Class AAA State Title last year in Murfreesboro.

ahead 36-32. The TSSAA ruled the game a no-contest.

"It looks like we're going to take what was a very unfortunate incident, and in the long run, it's going to be a positive," said Childress. "I have all the faith that those administrators at Austin-East as well as Brainerd are going to do exactly what they outlined for the Board that said what they were going to do. And that would be a positive."

Principal Nathan Langlois and athletic director Alvin Armstead presented A-E's plan to the Board of Control.

"It's about teaching young people that they're going to experience struggles in their life, but you can always turn a negative into a positive if you work at it," continued Childress.

"Not only will it be something that they can be proud of in their own communities and their own athletic programs, but it will be a footprint as we go forward in the (TSSAA) organization.

"We could say, 'Look, this is what these schools did.' We had an unsportsmanlike incident, but you can turn this into a positive. We can all go out there and compete and have fun and not get into those type situations ever again."

Childress said it could be a "great example" to all member schools in the TSSAA.

"We have all the confidence that's exactly what's going to happen," he added.

Austin-East and Brainerd representatives are scheduled to meet with the Board of Control again in June. If the Board rules favorably, the Roadrunners and Panthers will return to postseason tournament play in 2019.

Childress said Board members were impressed by the A-E administrators' presentation Feb. 8, the way they took responsibility for everything that had happened and their outline of things they wanted to do to change the culture not just in their athletic program but in their community.

"There were even some comments from Board members after they presented their appeal," said Childress.

"Some of the Board members commented that it was one of the better appeals that we've heard. That says a lot."

A District 4-AAA baseball game is a difficult challenge to face. West High School had a league Wednesday night and that was going to be tough enough.

But the Rebels had to face a little unforeseen adversity before the first pitch was even thrown. The game was delayed 48 minutes because an umpiring supervisor failed to schedule officials for West High's game against Lenoir City.

But the Rebels overcame the late start and held off the pesky Panthers 4-1 at Lindsay-Hawkins Park in Marble City.

"They always play us tough," said Rebels coach Buzz McNish, who formerly coached at Lenoir City. "District wins are hard to come by around here and then you have a delay.

"We come in and you get all geared up to play and then you have to wait over 40 minutes and it's hard to get refocused and ready to play."

The Rebels (15-2 overall, 3-2 in District 4-AAA) weren't particularly sharp out of the gate as the Panthers (2-8, 0-6) took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning.

Lenoir City scored its lone run of the contest with two outs in the opening frame. Freshman second baseman Garrett Tollett started things with a one-out single. He advanced to third one out later when Zach Spears reached on an error. Tollett would come home when Cory Lankford got aboard on another defensive miscue by the Rebels, who were coming into the game on the heels of a 14-1 district win over Catholic Tuesday.

West would knot the game 1-1 in the bottom of the first and the Rebels started a rally after their leadoff hitter was retired by Panthers freshman right-hander Gabe Williams, who was making the first start of his high school career.

Matt Holocek and Cal Cook strung together back-to-back singles. An RBI single by first baseman Roland Ryan plated Holocek with the tying run.

Williams was able to avert further damage as he struck out West pitcher Ian McGilvray and got Jake Wilhoit to rap into an inning-ending fielder's choice.

The Rebels mounted another one-out threat in their half of the second as

Hardin Valley has it going the Wright way in track and field

By Steve Williams

A little past the midway point of the high school track and field season, Willington Wright of Hardin Valley Academy appears to be competing like he's on a mission.

The Hawks' senior was No. 1 in the state in three different events as of Friday, April 6, according to the Tennessee Runner MileSplit Outdoor Rankings.

Wright posted a time of 21.8 in the 200-meter dash at the Sevier County meet on March 20. He had a leap of 46 feet, 9½ inches in the triple jump at the HVA Invitational March 23-24. Then Wright turned in a sizzling 47.9 in the 400 at the Farragut Invitational March 31.

All three performances rank No. 1 from Memphis to the Tri-Cities of upper East Tennessee.

Wright has company on the list too from other Knox County athletes.

Bearden senior Joshua Sobota ranked No. 1 in the shot put event with a heave of 61 feet at the South Knoxville Classic last week.

Hardin Valley Academy has three relay teams with the state's best times - its boys' 4x400 (3:28.90) and 4x800 (8:22.51) and its girls' 4x800 (9:51.69). All three of these times were posted at the Farragut Invitational.

Sand flies as HVA senior Willington Wright lands in the long jump pit. In addition to the triple jump, Willington also ranks No. 1 in the state in the 400 and 200-meter dashes.

4x200 relay also ranks No. 1 in the state with its time of 1:29.83 that was clocked at the Knoxville West meet last week.

"Willington is the brother of our guy (Weldon Wright) that won state in triple jump and long jump a few years ago," said Hardin Valley Coach Bryan Brown.

"Our 4x400 relay actually ran without Will (at Farragut Invitational), but with him on there, we finished sixth in the national indoor meet."

Wright had a good year as a junior in 2017, but he has made a lot of progress in his times and distances since then.

At last spring's KIL meet, Wright took first place in the 400 with a time of 50.44. He also placed second in the long jump (21-4¼) and second in the triple jump (44-4½).

In the state meet last May, Wright finished fourth in the triple jump (44-2) and ninth in the 400 (50.39).

The winning mark at the state last year in the triple jump was 48-3½, while a time of 48.18 was tops in the 400.

With Wright already having run faster than that in the 400 this season, he could be going after some gold at the Spring Fling in Murfreesboro next month.

STORY TIME: Rebecca Story, Stanford signee from Christian Academy of Knoxville, was slated to make her outdoor season debut Friday in Oak Ridge.

"I am going to run my first race of the season at the Ben Martin Invitational (April 6)," she said. "I will be running at KIL next month. My coach is still deciding what other races I will be running this season."

TSSAA HAS NEW classifications in track and field this year, with Large and Small for schools in Division I. Schools in Division II are classified Class AA and Class A, according to enrollment.

COMING UP: Two of the regular season's biggest high school track and field events are around the corner, with the Volunteer Track Classic slated for April 20-21 at UT's Tom Black Track and the annual KIL meet April 30 and May 1 at Hardin Valley Academy.

Changes for Tennessee men's basketball

By Alex Norman

Over the past couple of years, the off season was a welcome time in the world of Tennessee basketball. From 2015-2017, the Vols didn't play in the postseason, and frankly everyone was ready for a temporary break. But that was before the 2017-2018 season, in which the Vols exceeded expectations, shared the SEC championship, advanced to the SEC tournament finals and came within a bucket of the Sweet 16.

Last week a couple of stories hit the newswire that are worth paying attention to for a team that is considered by some to be one of the top five in the country heading into the 2018-2019 season.

First, Tennessee announced that senior guard Chris Darrington will be transferring. "We appreciate all of Chris' contribution both on and off the court this past year," said Tennessee head coach Rick Barnes in a statement release by the University of Tennessee. "We all wish him nothing but the best moving forward."

Darrington joined the program from the JUCO ranks in the off season, and looked good during summer exhibition games in Europe, leading the team in scoring. He would play in 25 games for the Vols during the regular season, but minutes were hard to come by as the season waned on. He averaged 8.4 minutes per game and 2.6 points per contest.

This means the Vols will have two scholarships to offer for next year, including one when senior guard James Daniel III graduated. The Vols are in desperate need of point guard help, and that will be an emphasis this recruiting cycle.

The other big news happening last week involved the popular Rocky Top League, the summer exhibition league that has been a fan favorite since Bruce Pearl sparked the efforts in 2007. Fox Sports Radio reported that the league will not take place this summer. This reasoning behind that decision is that it gives Tennessee's players more time to concentrate on the off season conditioning.

That is completely understandable. In watching those games I often wondered what the reaction would have been if, say, Tyler Smith had blown out his knee during what was a meaningless exhibition. The league might have been cancelled immediately. So it makes complete sense to stop playing.

But from a fans point of view, it is sad to see the games go. In later years the games were played at Knoxville Catholic. But most of these games took place at Bearden High School. Let me tell know... a gym with no air conditioning in later spring and early summer? Man it was toasty.

But it was so much fun to watch those games. Not only the current Tennessee players, but the alums like Wayne Chism and Ron Slay that would come back to town to hone their skills. Plus, players with local ties that didn't play for Tennessee that got a chance to shine.

The absence of the Rocky Top League leaves a significant void in the summer months. There is only so much sports media material that one can read about the Tennessee quarterback position battle. Think about it. On June 1st there are still three months to go before Tennessee opens the season against West Virginia in Charlotte. The RTL was a great break in the summer doldrums.

We still have the Tennessee Smokies... and high school football practice starts in mid-July... but overall it's pretty barren locally.

If nothing else, we are seeing how important Tennessee men's basketball is now to the Knoxville sports fan. It hasn't always been that way...

A great sports moment is unnecessarily tarnished

This year there was a lot more drama in the NCAA women's Final Four than in the men's.

By Steve Williams

When Loyola of Chicago's Cinderella run ended against Michigan in the semifinals, my interest in the men's tourney dropped like an air ball.

Meanwhile, those ladies' games had matchups the likes of Frazier vs. Ali in boxing, Connors vs. McEnroe in tennis and Bird vs. Magic in basketball.

(I know, I'm showing my age with these comparisons. But you should YouTube some of those rivalries.)

Seconds after Notre Dame's Arike Ogunbowale beat Mississippi State 61-58 with that off-balance 3-point shot for the title, I told my brother John that my newspaper headline the next morning would simply say: Giant killer!

After all, she had slayed UConn much the same way in the semifinals. Still, I didn't like how the women's finale ended.

Taking all that time to put 0:00.1 (one-tenth of a second) back on the clock seemed to squeeze a little of the fun out of a Lady Irish celebration that already had begun. And putting the Lady Bulldogs back on the court in a hopeless situation so the last 0:00.1 could disappear just seemed to add to their agony.

By rule, the only way a team can score under 0:00.4 (four-tenths of a second) is with a tip. Mississippi State needed three points in that situation. When was the last time you saw a ball tipped in 20 feet from the basket?

In my opinion, a storybook ending to a great game was tarnished by the impossible.

What if Ogunbowale's shot had given Notre Dame a four-point lead? Would officials have taken time to reset the clock to 0:00.1 and put the Lady Bulldogs back on the court?

Probably, because that's their job. That's what they are supposed to do.

Here's another scenario that could happen in that kind of situation: Tempers flare and a brawl breaks out as players line up for a meaningless play. Would we want an outcome decided by a slew of technical foul shots?

The TSSAA has a rule in football that if a touchdown is scored as time runs out, the extra point is not tried if it has no bearing on determining the winner and the game is over.

Here's a tip (no pun intended) for the NCAA rules committee. Put in a special rule to better end a game like Notre Dame and Mississippi State had.

Call it "the Arike rule." The first name of the ND star is pronounced uh-REE-kay.

When officials determine there is three-tenths of a second or less remaining in a game and Team B is trailing by three points or more, the game is over and Team A is the winner.

If a rule like that had been in the book, the Lady Irish's joyous celebration could have proceeded with no further interruption and the Lady Bulldogs would have had a little easier time dealing with the heart-breaking loss.

And a great moment in sports wouldn't have been tarnished.

Rebels withstand delay to down Lenoir City 4-1 catcher Logan Cox drew a walk and was lifted for courtesy runner Grant Tierney, who came into the game and stole second. He, however, was stranded in scoring position when Williams fanned the next two West hitters to get out of the inning.

"Their pitcher [Williams] did a good job," McNish said.

New Lenoir City head coach Dusty Langley also lauded Williams' effort and commended his squad for its overall competitiveness.

"You look at this score and it was a 4-1 loss and I told my kids that I would gladly take that," Langley said. "I have three seniors and I have freshmen all the way up the middle of the field.

"My pitcher was a freshman and he was making his first start. I had a freshman at shortstop and a freshman second baseman. Our defense was good but in the end, they got the hits when they had to have them. West is a good team. They're 15-2 and they've beaten some good teams."

West took a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the third when McGilvray doubled in Holocech, who singled and later stole second.

The Rebels added a pair of insurance runs in the fifth as Wilhoit had an RBI single and Brandon Langenberg knocked another run with a sacrifice fly.

Sometimes, it's hard for me to remember whether I've written about something or just thought about it. As a result, I have a new project putting my previous five hundred and thirteen Focus essays in a computer file which I can then easily search. If I had realized ten years ago that I would still be writing for The Focus, I would have been organizationally more proactive.

This week I've been thinking about vaccinations, after several of my patients asked me about the new shingles vaccine. I've written previously about vaccines, how they work and shingles prevention in particular. I know this because Mr. Computer and his assistant Mr. Search Engine were able to find these topics in my newly formatted computer file, aptly entitled Knoxville Focus essays!

Shingles is a reactivation of the herpes zoster virus which most of us acquired in childhood when we had chickenpox. The immune system controls the primary chickenpox infection, but the herpes virus remains dormant in spinal nerve roots forever. Then, as the immune system ages and becomes less vigilant, the virus reactivates to produce the characteristic shingles rash and pain.

I wrote about shingles and the vaccine, Zostavax, after it was marketed in 2006. This vaccine uses a weakened (live-attenuated) herpes zoster virus to stimulate the immune system. Zostavax lessens the chance of having shingles by two thirds and reduces the chance of after-shingles neuralgia by half. Vaccination is also used to prevent primary herpes zoster infection (chickenpox) in children.

Given the fact that the incidence of shingles increases as we age, vaccination is recommended to boost the immune system for adult patients over sixty years old. Unfortunately, the protective effects of shingles vaccination wane after five to eight years. Furthermore, since Zostavax is produced with a weakened but live virus, it can't be given to patients with a damaged immune system, despite their high risk of shingles disease.

Recently, a new vaccine (Shingrix) has been developed which uses a herpes surface protein (glycoprotein E), rather than a live virus, to boost the immune system. Shingrix is significantly more effective (>90%) at preventing shingles than the older, Zostavax vaccine. Furthermore, the new vaccine can be given to patients with damaged immune systems, though it may be less effective in these patients.

Perhaps, because it is more effective, the new vaccine causes significantly more side effects such as arm pain at the site of the injection and sometimes fever. The new vaccine also requires two intramuscular injections two to six months apart, whereas the old vaccine requires just one subcutaneous injection. Shingrix is also more expensive ($350) than Zostavax ($250), though Medicare and most private insurance companies are covering the vaccines with variable copay costs. Choosing between the two vaccine may be moot, because Zostavax may soon be deemed obsolete and no longer be available. Knoxville Kroger pharmacies have already sent their supply of the older vaccine back to their corporate warehouse.

There is also a newer pneumonia (pneumococcal) vaccination called Prevnar. It's complicated because the older vaccine Pneumovax is actually best used in tandem with Prevnar because both have unique properties, and together expand protection against the most common type of bacterial pneumonia.

There are some things I miss from my previous life of traditional medical practice. Most notably, I miss the patients I once cared for. As a semi-retired doc, I now care for about eighty folks, but in the old fashion "hands on" way. In fact, going over previous essays while organizing my Focus file, brought two patient's stories to mind.

The first story I've told before, but it's so good it merits a retelling. MC arrived as my last patient on the last day of my traditional medical practice. Unbeknownst to me, she had collected every essay

I'd written for The Focus in scrapbooks which she gave me as a retirement and Christmas present. In a 2013 Focus essay I compared her gift to one described in the beautiful short story by O. Henry called "The Gift of the Magi." I have honored my former patient by continuing to collect my essays in now more than a half dozen scrapbooks. However, I needed a better way to search five hundred plus essays than leafing through scrapbooks, so I've created a computer collection of "The Doctor Is In."

I've never shared the second reminiscence, because it involves a tragedy. LP was an attorney, an accomplished poet and like me a migraineur. But, unlike me she was devastated by her refractory headaches which ultimately destroyed her ability to practice her profession and then opioids took her life. I thought of her when I recently reviewed an essay called "The Rat Park" I write about two years ago. But I think of her even more often since Becky and I moved to our new home. You find lots of things when you move, and I found a poem LP once gave me. Using a Google search, I could not find evidence that this poem was ever published. So, my homage to LP is to share "The Faith Healer" with you.

Hands on, in the way of the old folks,

A healer with science at his fingertips

Must know still that the path to health

Is paved with compassion.

For a great healer must enter

The heart of his patient;

Must hear even the unspoken language of pain,

The unwritten vocabulary of striving,

The quiet yearnings

That lie beneath the skin,

Under the tendons,

Under the bones.

These elements show

On no MRI, on no X-ray.

The true healer must listen to the heart

Without a stethoscope,

And when even science offers

No answers, no hope,

Must give dignity to suffering

And even to death,

Through the small yet colossal acts of love

That come, in the end, only through faith.

When I someday "shuffle off this mortal coil," and my essence transcends to another reality, I hope to find MC and LP and to thank my old friends for their kindness and lingering reminiscences.

The Crucifixion of King Jesus

Crucifixion was a tool used by the Romans, and other nations, to strike fear into the heart of its subjects. Rome used crucifixion as a means for execution for some eight hundred years. It was a horrible, terrifying death. Crucifixion was so incredibly painful, they actually invented a new term for such suffering - "excruciating" - which means "out of the cross." The executions were public and took place along major roadways so all could see. Cicero, the Roman politician and lawyer, who served as consul in the year 63 BC, called crucifixion the "extreme and ultimate punishment of slaves" and the "cruellest and most disgusting penalty." The first-century Jewish historian, Josephus, called it "the most pitiable of deaths."

Usually, the vertical beam of the cross was left in place at the site of execution. After the victim was flogged, they would be forced to carry the crossbeam, which could weigh up to one hundred pounds. The victims were often left hanging for weeks until their bodies were consumed by birds and wild prey. Some of the bodies were placed on trash heaps, and bones scattered unless loved one's claimed them. The Romans often did not allow families to take the bodies; however, in Jerusalem the people could bury their dead.

The chief aim of crucifixion was to inflict the greatest amount of pain for the longest time. Victims could hang on crosses for several days before they died. The victim's arms could be nailed to the cross at the wrists, which were also considered part of the hands. The arms could also be tied to the cross with ropes. The feet were always nailed to the cross.

Most crosses were no larger than nine feet tall. They would allow room at the top of the cross for a sign detailing the victim's crime. This would put the feet of the victim only three feet or so off the ground. This would put Jesus only a few feet off the ground in front of the disciple John, his mother, and the soldiers who hurled insults at Jesus.

Many scholars attribute asphyxiation as a cause of death for crucifixion. You have to lift one-self up in order to exhale. The longer you hung on the cross, the more exhausted you became in order to exhale. The buildup of fluid around the heart and in the lungs would also cause congestive heart failure. This was seen after Jesus died, when a soldier pierced the side of Jesus and there was water and blood that came out. The loss of fluids and dehydration would also contribute to hypovolemic shock. These factors worked against Jesus as he hung on the cross for six hours. What amazing love!

Jesus' nail scarred hands are a perpetual reminder to God of his sacrifice for us. What took place at Calvary is hard to describe with words and the implications are too much to comprehend. There are various views of the Atonement that try to capture all that was accomplished at the cross. At times when we have done something sinful, we feel Christ as our substitute and have been comforted by the punishment he bore for us. At other times we have seen in his suffering the brokenness of our lives and amazed by his love that will not let us go. Other times we have been pushed to give selflessly to others out of debt and gratitude for what Jesus had done for us. His atoning work is amazing.

The Collingsworth Family to take the stage

The award winning Collingsworth Family is coming to East Tennessee for one appearance only! Excitement, spiritual anointing, family-emphasis, and musical excellence are what you can expect to find when you step across the threshold of the worship center of Wallace Memorial Baptist Church, Knoxville, Tennessee on Saturday, April 21, 2018, for an Evening of Family Worship and Praise with The Collingsworth Family.

Since their first engagement together as musicians for a church camp in Petersburg, Michigan in August, 1986 until now, the ministry God has given Phil and Kim has expanded and flourished until it is a full-time livelihood that involves their entire family. Their boundaries of influence have expanded as they have sung and played all over the United States (as well as internationally) into their 27th year of ministry. Their constant, persistent attention to cutting-edge arranging, musical excellence, and a proper balance of spiritual emphasis are the keys to success God has helped them tap.

In January, 2000, Phil and Kim transitioned to a new, all-concert ministry. They began recording professionally and currently utilize Nashville's most award-winning producers, Wayne Haun and David Clydesdale. Their home has seen the addition of four children across the years and the children are now very actively involved in the ministry. Their two oldest daughters are quite proficient on the violin and play at each of their concerts. Their entire family sings together in an ensemble. Kim is well-known for her phenomenal mastery of the piano and the extraordinary talent God has given her is a part of each concert, as well as trumpet solos from Phil. Their newest full-scale studio project, "That Day Is Coming," includes their current national radio single, "When He Carries Me Away" written by Adina Bowman and Rachel McCutcheon.

Russ Woolard, President of New Destiny Productions is pleased to showcase The Collingsworth Family on what will be a magical evening. Tickets are available now by calling 1-800-965-9324 or online www.newdestinyproductions.com.

going to be for seven days?

What do they put into cat food that helps diminish their hair balls?

The answers to these questions are obvious, especially in this technical and digital age. Back in the forties and fifties people were just beginning to realize the stupendous knowledge that was forthcoming in their times. Actually, perhaps they were curious since the beginning of time. Think of the cavemen who discovered the wheel and fire.

Wouldn't we look silly, flying through the air with our heavy bodies? Bumping into each other? We have no wings unless our arms would substitute for wings, but we would soon fall to the earth.

I am a knitter and one time when I was knitting my yarn became snarled. When I untangled it I noticed that a strand of yarn was made up of miniature strands, no wider than a strand of my hair. How can that be?

The time to start is when we're young. Study whatever interests you. Be filled with wonder, and the answers will come into your brain like a light bulb. There's a reason for everything and intelligent people down through the ages were prone to find out the possibilities in their realm, and we will pass them along to future generations.

I do know one thing, I will never, ever be on the television show "Jeopardy!"

Thought for the day: The more you lose yourself in something bigger than yourself, the more energy you will have. Norman Vincent Peale

FEATURED GARDENS

Saturday, April 14 [10:00 am-5:00 pm]

Sunday, April 15 [12:00-5:00 pm]

DR. ALAN SOLOMON

2705 Riverside Drive, Knoxville 37914

Included in the Smithsonian Institution's Archives of American Gardens, GATOP [God's Answer To Our Prayers] features many hundreds of botanical specimens such as conifers and hollies, extensive displays of wildflowers, perennials, and groundcovers, as well as numerous water features and large marble outcroppings. Complimenting this unusual garden are stainless-steel, iron, bronze, and stone sculptures. This site features one of Knoxville's oldest marble quarries.

HAYS GARDEN

2925 Keller Bend Road 37922

Set on the banks of Fort Loudon Lake, work on the Hays Gardens started in 1992. From the broad expanse of waterfront to the towering marble formations, the gardens are a study in contrasts.

The gardens began with construction of a pond and waterfall within the old marble quarry located on the property. More woods were cleared in 2013 to start additional woodland gardens and another waterfall cascading over massive marble formations.

A fenced cottage garden features perennials, roses, shrubs and annuals.

HOME OF EDDIE MANNIS

3835 Kingston Pike

These elegant gardens are inspired by the original Gustav Stickley designed Arts and Crafts home - circa 1925. They echo the same casual formality that was found in most Stickley-designed homes.

The large Veranda introduces breath-taking vistas set against a backdrop of Red and White Oak trees that are over a century old. At the bottom of the terraced gardens is an Arts and Crafts fireplace similar to the original Stickley design found inside the home. There is also a hidden grassy alcove surrounded with blossoming hydrangeas and rare Danae racemosa.

The path that circles the entire garden meanders by the original stone pond and stacked stone bench.

The abundant color transforms these gardens into an ever changing panorama of splendor.

Dogwood Arts, presented by ORNL Federal Credit Union, is a 501(c)3 organization with a mission to promote and celebrate our region's art, culture, and natural beauty. For more information on Dogwood Arts, visit www.dogwoodarts.com or call (865) 637-4561.

Tennessee Stage Company Presents SHAKESPEARE OUT LOUD

Who: The Tennessee Stage Company
Where: Lawson McGhee Library
When: April 15, 2018, 2:00 p.m. Sunday Afternoon
ALL READINGS FREE

The best way to read Shakespeare's plays is out loud – and with friends!

The Tennessee Stage Company and Shakespeare On The Square invite you to read Shakespeare's plays with the group – out loud!

Getting back into the swing of it, the next reading date is Sunday, April 15, when the company will gather at the Lawson McGhee Library to read the classic comedy "As You Like It," which will also be performed by 70/30 Creative at various locations around town in May 2018.

IT'S FREE AND FUN!

Readings are at the Lawson McGhee Library on Sunday afternoons. Readings are free and open to the public. Hearing these plays read aloud offers much more insight into the depths of Shakespeare's work.

The reading will begin at 2:00 p.m. There will be chairs set up and whoever wants to read out loud can choose one. There will be additional seating for anyone who wants to read along silently. Copies of the play will be available but please bring your own if possible.

EVERYONE IS WELCOME

All voices, all dialects are welcome. The plays are read for the joy of reading them and to hear and discover more about the plays, especially plays that have not yet been performed by Shakespeare On The Square. Maybe one of these is the one the company should perform next!

CHAPMAN HIGHWAY DOGWOOD TRAIL

Welcome to Chapman Highway Dogwood Trail, where wild red bud trees vie with the dogwoods in beauty. Established in 1957, this trail is a two-part story; please follow the pink lines through Colonial Village and Lake Forest Neighborhoods.

On the left is the natural spring-fed Butterfly Lake where Great Blue Herons, ducks and geese are often seen along the edges of the quiet water. A variety of birds and wildlife are drawn to this area because of the old established trees and large wooded areas. Notice the lovely rock gardens with bright candytuft, tulips and creeping phlox. Built in the 1940s, these modest cottage-style houses offer the convenience of easy access to downtown and are a favorite with those who like the feeling of privacy and seclusion. At street intersections, it is possible to look down on drifts of wild dogwood trees whose massed blooms turn the hillside white.

Dogwood branches almost meet overhead as the trail dips down West Redbud Drive. Crossing at the light, you enter Lake Forest and passing the other half of the original spring-fed lake, which was split when Chapman Highway was constructed. The trail

As you come down the hill on East Lake Forest Drive, you are only a block away from the Post Oak neighborhood entrance to The Urban Wilderness Loop, which connects William Hastie Natural Area (6.3 miles of trails) with Ijams Nature Center and Mead’s Quarry.

Throughout the neighborhood, you will see examples of Tennessee Pink Marble, once quarried in the Knoxville area. Larger blocks were used in buildings all over the U.S. or carved into monuments, such as the famous lion statues in front of the New York Public Library. Local builders used the smaller left over pieces to construct retaining walls, arched doorways, chimneys, patios, and whole houses.

As the trail comes to an end, turn left and in 30 minutes you will be in the Smokies and turn right and in 3 miles you will be in downtown Knoxville.

ISLAND HOME DOGWOOD TRAIL

Welcome to the Island Home Trail in historic Island Home Park.

Island Home Park was developed as a streetcar suburb when interest in South Knoxville increased after the Gay Street Bridge was built in 1897-98. The original trolley turn-around (the location of the information box) served the first 1912 trolley line. The trolley soon traveled through the neighborhood along Island Home

Boulevard, reversing at the top of Fisher Place.

The entry columns, erected circa 1899, marked the perimeter of Island Home, the late nineteenth century farm and summer home of wealthy merchant Perez Dickinson. Dickinson's Italianate home remains perched on the hill inside the campus of Tennessee School for the Deaf, the eastern boundary of the neighborhood.

Many Island Home

Park homes and gardens were built during the first decades of the 20th century. The use of river stone on piers and porches of classic bungalows is unique to the neighborhood, which is listed on the National Registry of Historic Places. Homes have been constructed during each decade since the 1910s.

The Island Home Boulevard median and gardens throughout the neighborhood have state-ly old and newer trees, which replace hardwoods and dogwoods lost after 100 years. Many "granddaddy dogwoods" remain, including a few original dark pink dogwoods. A champion white dogwood stands on Island Home Boulevard and a Hillsboro Heights home is the location of the Knox County champion white dogwood.

UT Gardens' April 2018 Plant of the Month: Koreanspice viburnum

Submitted by Sue Hamilton, director, UT Gardens, Knoxville

The cherries have bloomed and so have the magnolias and redbuds. Next we'll see the spring displays of dogwoods, azaleas, and another very special group of plants that I love: the viburnums. Many are not familiar with viburnums, but I can't imagine any landscape not having at least one. They have so many outstanding qualities. Viburnums comprise a huge group of plants that includes more than 150 species and oodles of named cultivars. They include deciduous and evergreen shrubs and even small trees. Most are native to North America or Asia.

If I had to select just one viburnum to have in my spring landscape, it would be the Koreanspice viburnum. Known botanically as Viburnum carlesii, this viburnum is one of the most fragrant spring-flowering shrubs you can have in the landscape. As the common name implies, it is native to Korea and has spicy, clove-scented blooms. Beautiful pink to red buds lead to showy half-inch white flowers that form 2- to 3-inch snowball-like clusters.

In Tennessee, flowering usually starts around late March lasting into mid April. The plant species grows up to 8-foot tall and wide, with a dense, rounded habit. This deciduous shrub has foliage that usually turns dull red in fall but may sometimes display attractive shades of wine-red to burgundy. It prefers full sun to part shade in well-drained soil. Red turning to black, small, drupe fruit mature in late summer. Because of numerous varieties on the market, this shrub lends itself well for multiple uses in the landscape.

Depending upon selection, cultivars range 3- to 8-foot tall and 3- to 8-foot wide. Use in mass or mix with other plantings. Viburnum species make nice shrub borders, hedges or foundation plants. Small selections can be grown in decorative containers.

Following are the most popular selections of Koreanspice viburnum on the market that I recommend; all grow well in our region of the country.

- 'Cayuga' - This hybrid selection was introduced by the U.S. National Arboretum and is considered a superior plant. It is a large, dense grower that reaches 5-foot tall and 7-foot wide. Striking pink buds lead to pink fading to white blooms.

- 'Aurora' is known for having a superior floral display. The clusters are larger with pink-white blooms that open from deep pink buds. The fragrance is very strong. This cultivar grows 6- to 8-foot high and wide. Its prolific deep pink-red buds open to pinkish-white flowers.

- 'Compactum' is a dwarf form reaching 3- to 4-foot high. It was originally introduced by a Rhode Island nursery in 1953.

- Spice Bouquet™ grows 4- to 5-foot high and 5- to 6-foot wide. Dark rose-pink buds open to soft pink flowers.

- Spice Island™ grows 3- to 5-foot high and wide. It sports red-pink buds and white flowers. It also features dark green leaves and a red color in the autumn.

- Sugar N' Spice™ grows 4- to 5-foot high and wide. It has dark green leaves and a maroon color in autumn.

- Spice Baby™ is compact growing 3- to 5-foot tall and just as wide.

You can find Cayuga, Compactum, and Spice Baby on display in the UT Gardens, Knoxville.
