Mannis wins primary, faces Kincannon in November

Knoxville mayoral candidate Eddie Mannis addresses supporters after Tuesday night's primary at the Grande Event Center. Mannis, the top vote getter, will face Indya Kincannon in November's general election.

By Ken Lay

Eddie Mannis may have been the top vote getter in Tuesday night's Knoxville City mayoral primary. But he knows his work is far from done.

"The hard work is just beginning," Mannis said in his speech to supporters.. "I cannot do this alone. I need your support and most of all, I need your vote."

Mannis addressed the crowd at The Grande Event Center after it was clear that he and Indya Kincannon would emerge from a crowded field of mayoral candidates to advance to the November general election. He thanked his friends, family, supporters and campaign team.

But he cautioned his team not to get complacent with Tuesday's results, which saw him get nearly 37% of the vote.

"It's been a phenomenal ground operation that you normally don't see in a mayoral election and I'm proud of the team for all of their hard work," Mannis said. "As you've seen from the screens here this evening, the hard work has paid off."

"Take an hour or two off, but we have to hit the ground running tomorrow, or maybe the next day. We have to work to get the vote again or maybe for the first time."

During his speech, Mannis showed humility and gratitude for those who voted for him.

The Knoxville City general election ballot is set and Eddie Mannis will face Indya Kincannon in the race to become the next mayor. Mannis led in both early voting and absentee ballots and ended up Tuesday evening with 36.64% of the vote.

Kincannon inched out Marshall Stair with 29.13% of the vote to Stair's 26.98%.

The real surprise of the evening was Amelia Parker topping the four other candidates in the At-Large Seat C race with 29.85%. She pulled more votes than the presumed favorite Amy Midis who came in second in a tight race and received 29.08% of the vote. The two women will face each other in November.

Also in the Seat C race former Commissioner Bob Thomas ran a very close third with 26.35%. Hubert Smith and David Williams both pulled less than 9% each in voter ballots.

Reorganization, Ancient Village at commission meeting

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

The annual reorganization of the Knox County Commission came into question at last week's work session as three members said they may not be at the planned September 3 meeting. Commissioner Michele Carringer, who said recently her family has a planned trip and she would be out that date, urged her fellow members to choose another date.

The reorganization is important because the commission will choose a new chairperson and make committee assignments. Commissioner Evelyn Gill may be out because of a family death and Commissioner Charles Busler may be in South Carolina with his family. Busler said he noted the date on his calendar and would drive back to Knoxville for the meeting if necessary.

"Circumstances happen," Carringer, who serves as vice chair, told the other members. She said the reorganization can happen any time in September prior to their regular meeting that month and she asked them to set another day.

"Have some respect for our colleagues," she said.

Commissioner John Schoonmaker noted that the September 3 date was set 13 months ago and called for the meeting to be held on the first business day that month.

A postponement and new date was requested but it would take eight votes to suspend the rules to do so.

"The rules are a little concrete, the charter says sometime before our meeting in September," Commissioner Randy Smith said.

"It is not about respect it is about precedent. We all have conflicts," said Commissioner Larsen Jay speaking against changing the date.

"It seems like a rush and that's a little disturbing," Carringer replied, adding that the reorganization meeting is "one of the most important things we do."

Council talks pay raise for city judge, sign ordinance, Design Center funds

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

Barring a write-in candidate on the November ballot, it looks as if Judge John R. Rosson Jr. will continue to be the Municipal Judge for Knoxville. He will be the last judge to receive the current city salary of $47,000; the next city judge will be getting $74,000 each year.

The pay raise came up at the Knoxville City Council Tuesday. The resolution was sponsored by Councilmembers George Wallace, Mark Campen and Finbarr Saunders.

Wallace told the council he looked into the salaries of municipal judges around the area and settled on the increase. The judge does not receive the standard 2.5% increase that other city employees get each year because the judgeship is an elected position.

"He does quite a bit of work," Wallace said and added he believes the raise is fair since the salary hasn't been increased in seven years. Asked by Councilwoman Seema Singh if Judge Rosson had requested the raise, Wallace said, "He mentioned it to me."

Councilwoman Lauren Rider said the salaries of city employees "are not stagnant" and said the judge's salary is an example of an elected position's salary that is stagnant.

The pay increase was authorized with a unanimous vote.

The council also voted to ask the planning commission to look into minor revisions to the city's sign ordinance. Two citizens, Joyce Feld and Carlene Malone, the council the funds included $26,000 of "in kind service" by volunteers. He said the Design Center will celebrate 50 years next year and described the various projects the center did over the years for the 16 counties it serves.

Councilwoman Gwen McKenzie reminded everyone of the upcoming African-American Breast Cancer Awareness Week, September 8-14. The week was recognized by the council to raise awareness and possibly reduce breast cancer-related mortality and disparity among African-American women in our state.

The council also approved two rezoning requests for 414 East Inskip Drive and 4330 Papermill Drive. Four properties with No Zone established were designated as A-1 (Lynbrulee Lane), R-1A (Northshore Drive), S-2 (Chimney Top Lane) and O-1 (Brock Avenue).

Approved by the council was $1,200 funding for the Legacy Parks Foundation's Legacy Luncheon and $1,750 for Ijam's Nature Center's Symphony in the Parks.

Shooting death protested at City Council

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

About two dozen people protested the shooting death of a 33-year-old man of Cambodian descent who was allegedly shot by a city police officer during a confrontation last week. The protesters marched to the City-County Building Tuesday evening, protested outside, and then entered the building to continue the protest during the regular meeting of the Knoxville City Council.

Channara Tommy "Philly" Pheap died in the incident and a policeman, later identified as Dylan M. Williams, was injured, treated and released.

Normally the Public Forum is at the end of a council meeting but Councilwoman Seema Singh asked that they be permitted to speak prior to the agenda. The council agreed and several of the protesters spoke, including some who routinely object at city and county meetings.

Constance Every and one other speaker called for the removal of Police Chief Eve Thomas, demanded an independent investigation be opened and that body cameras be placed on policemen.

The protesters spoke in forum for 45 minutes, with each speaker being applauded by standing protesters chanting, "No Justice, No Peace." Included in the demands was that the Police Advisory and Review Committee (PARC) be given power to investigate and discipline officers.

Rick Roach said there is "no accountability" in the city for police actions and spoke on behalf of the idea of community policing.

Noah Nordstrom said that the "police is an active threat to our community" and called for a halt of plans to use the former St. Mary's Hospital as a police headquarters.

One protester who spoke was joined by Pheap's daughter and his mother. He said that the victim's body was left lying in the rain for three hours.

Jane Crow, who identified herself as a social worker, said the incident resulted because the community has "institutionalized racism" and added, "We're going to change this town, this is just the beginning."

David Hayes called for the release of the dash camera footage and demanded an independent investigation, not one by the sheriff or police department.

Another speaker said, "We white people need to call each other out!"

Another speaker, who identified himself as a behavioral health worker, said that those in his profession are trained for two weeks in de-escalation procedures, which is more than city officers, and called for accountability.

Mayor Rogero responded, "We have heard you," and called for everyone to wait until the Knox County Sheriff's Department's investigation of the city officer's actions is reported back to the city. She said the findings of the investigation will go the District Attorney General for a decision.

The police officer is on administrative leave pending the District Attorney's finding. The City Police's Internal Affairs will conduct an additional investigation following the DA's report to determine if the officer violated any department policies. Then the case will be turned over to the Police Advisory Committee.

"I urge everyone to be patient," Rogero said in a statement released just prior to the city council meeting and which she read from at the meeting.

Eating that Roadkill You Just Created

By Jedidiah McKeehan
attorneyknoxville@gmail.com

So, you are driving down the road to your house, minding your own business, and an animal darts out in front of you. You simply do not have time to swerve and you hit the animal, and unfortunately, you kill it. You may be heart broken, you may feel terrible about it, but what should you do with the animal whose life you just ended?

I would be willing to bet that most of us would simply keep driving, or perhaps get out and check to see what the damage is to our vehicle if the animal is larger in size. However, there are other alternatives available to you as a motorist in Tennessee.

Pursuant to Tennessee Code Annotated section 70-4-115(c), motorists are not required to report game accidentally killed by the operation of a motor vehicle. Wild animals accidentally killed by a motor vehicle may be possessed by any person for personal use and consumption.

So, let's unpack that. Essentially this means that you are legally allowed to take home your fresh roadkill and eat it.

Let's be honest, the odds of you hitting an animal and you having the desire to prepare it for consumption and eating it while living in Tennessee are pretty small. However, this is actually a very, very common occurrence in Alaska. In Alaska, almost all roadkill is eaten. In Alaska, between 600 and 800 moose are killed each year by motor vehicles, creating up to 250,000 pounds of organic, free-range meat. That is a huge amount of food available for consumption.

In Tennessee, there is not near as many large animals that would actually be worth preparing for consumption. The animal that comes to mind in Tennessee that you might hit that you would want to possibly consume is deer, and Tennessee law specifically makes you take additional steps if you hit and kill a deer or a bear.

If you hit a deer, you may only consume it if you notify law enforcement within 48 hours of the animal's death and provide your name and address. If you hit a bear, you also have to notify law enforcement of such.

For you, personally, to ever brush up against this law you would have to first accidentally hit and kill an animal while driving, then decide that you would like to consume the animal that you just killed. Seems unlikely, but if you do, be aware of the laws with which you need to comply.

Publisher's Position Election Presents Clear Choice

By Steve Hunley,
Publisher
publisher@knoxfocus.com

The results of the City of Knoxville election presents a clear choice for voters. The two top vote-getters in the mayoral primary election were businessman Eddie Mannis and former Board of Education member Indya Kincannon. Mannis, a first-time candidate, proved to be a strong candidate. There were few surprises in the election results for the city council races which will pit Janet Testerman and Amy Midis against self-described "Democratic Socialist" candidates David Hayes and Amelia Parker. Lynne Fugate and Charles Lomax will proceed to the general election with the former Board of Education member remaining as heavy favorite.

One glaring difference between the two mayoral candidates is their widely divergent backgrounds. Eddie Mannis grew up in a working class family, genuinely knowing what it was to do without. Indya Kincannon grew up as the privileged daughter of a career government bureaucrat who eventually was elevated to head the U. S. Census Bureau.

Over the years Mannis has built up a hugely successful business, employing approximately 150 people. Kincannon was elected to the Knox County Board of Education where she supported then-superintendent Jim McIntyre as he overspent his budget. While boasting that she saved the school custodians from being outsourced, Kincannon usually sided with management against labor, especially when it came to teachers. Indya Kincannon has already admitted in one interview a string of regrets for not having sided with teachers during McIntyre's reign. Kincannon also backed Tracie Sanger, another McIntyre supporter, on the Knox County Board of Education against homeowner advocate and community activist Jamie Rowe.

Mannis knows how to set a budget and live within it, something Kincannon had difficulty accomplishing as a member of the Board of Education. Kincannon's annual fix for the school system was to petition the county commission to increase taxes for an entity that spends over half a billion tax dollars yearly.

All social progress usually comes down to one factor: MORE MONEY. Your money, your tax dollars. You can't help people without money. Most leaders accomplish that through balancing available revenue and resources, but there are also those who insist we have to help by spending tax dollars without it being subservient to the budget. Properly translated, that means spending what the government doesn't have or raising taxes.

Another big difference between Eddie Mannis and Indya Kincannon is their respective views of the Rogero administration's "Recode" vision. According to Knoxville's longest-serving mayor, Victor Ashe Recode is less a cleaning up of existing zoning ordinances than it is the most massive rezoning ordinance overhaul ever conceived in Knoxville's history. It also has a lot to do with the dream of urban leftists to remake cities in their image. In an interview with WATE-TV, Kincannon says she supports the "Housing First" approach and said, "Give people a roof over their heads and then give them the support they need to deal with the other issues they're facing." A noble notion to be sure, but what damage will it do to existing neighborhoods and how much will it drive up taxes? "The other issues" many of the homeless are facing, mental illness, drug and alcohol addiction and more besides, are big mountains to climb and costly to treat; so much so the State of Tennessee largely gave up. The City of Knoxville doesn't have the kind of money to invest in a huge housing program to be extensively sprinkled throughout existing neighborhoods.

Eddie Mannis has called for a delay in implementing Recode, which is facing serious legal questions as it is; Mannis has offered a logical plan to put Humpy-Dumpty back together again.

Make no mistake about it, Recode isn't just about housing; urban leftists dream of utilizing it to accomplish several cherished goals. That particular dream also is designed to affect carbon emissions and Councilwoman Stephanie Welch has already confessed one of the prime goals of Recode in Knoxville is to have people drive less. David Hayes, running for City Council, has already stated he prefers tearing down single-family homes, stated his opposition to condominiums, but was completely silent when asked his opinion of apartments.

Those candidates proclaiming themselves as "Democratic Socialists" rather than "Socialists" make a distinction that is not a difference. Kincannon has aligned herself with those candidates and the voters of Knoxville will ultimately determine the future of the city government. It is vital every voter participate and have a voice in determining Knoxville's future direction.

'New Left Urbanists' Want to Remake Your City

By Christopher F. Rufo

America's big cities are almost all dominated by the Democratic Party, but the politics of urban development are far from monolithic. In the past few years, a new faction has emerged across the country. Call them the new left urbanists.

These activists have big dreams. They want local governments to rebuild the urban environment -- housing, transit, roads and tolls -- to achieve social justice, racial justice and net-zero carbon emissions. They rally around slogans such as "ban all cars," "raze the suburbs" and "single-family housing is white supremacy" -- though they're generally white and affluent themselves, often employed in public or semipublic roles in urban planning, housing development and social advocacy. They treat public housing, mass transit and bike lanes as a holy trinity, and they want to impose their religion on you.

"The residential is political," wrote new left urbanists David Madden and Peter Marcuse in 2016.

"The shape of the housing system is always the outcome of struggles between different groups and classes." By dictating how cities build new housing, the logic goes, urbanists can dictate how people live and set right society's socioeconomic, racial and moral deficiencies.

One widely circulated left-urbanist plan from April 2018 comes from the People's Policy Project, a crowd-funded socialist think tank. The authors, Peter Gowan and Ryan Cooper, envision the construction of 10 million "municipal homes" over the next decade. The proposal imagines local governments building more housing units than the private construction industry and becoming the largest landlord in many cities.

The abysmal record of public housing in the U.S., from crime to decay, makes no difference to these urbanists. They rebrand "housing projects" as "municipal homes" and assert that new units will resemble neighborhoods in Stockholm, Vienna and Helsinki, rather than Detroit, Newark and Oakland.

Activists are concerned not only with the quantity of new housing but also with who builds and lives in it. New developments must be government-run and tick off the boxes of identity politics. In San Francisco, some activists oppose all private housing construction. A 2017 essay in the San Francisco Examiner called advocates for more market housing part of a "libertarian, anti-poor campaign to turn longtime sites of progressive organizing into rich-people-only zones" and compared them to white nationalists.

One might dismiss this as radical posturing, but public-housing advocates have seized real power in city halls. They've learned how to use the zoning and permitting bureaucracy to stanch private development. In San Francisco's Mission District, laundromat owner Bob Tillman had to spend $1.4 million and nearly five years to gain permission to convert his business into an apartment building. Activists and their enablers in City Hall claimed the laundry business was "historic" and that development would displace minority residents. At one point the planning commission hired a "shadow consultant" to assess whether the shadows cast by the proposed building could cause harm to the community.

In New York City, progressive urbanists have focused on public transportation. The subway system was designed mostly in the early 20th century to serve the practical needs of New Yorkers, but today's activists see it as a grand instrument for cosmic justice.

In the Straphangers Campaign's 2018 "Transportation and Equity" report, the advocacy group begins from the premise that "the most vulnerable New Yorkers suffer disproportionately from high fares, long commutes, polluted air, and dangerous streets." It ends up estimating that an additional $30 billion in tax revenue would be needed for its desired overhaul: upgrading 11 subway lines, building 130 new accessible stations, and purchasing more than 3,000 new subway cars, along with nearly 5,000 new buses, over the next 10 years.

While state and local leaders haven't signed up for this ambitious plan, Gov. Andrew Cuomo, Mayor Bill de Blasio and other local politicians have expressed support for some of the activists' funding proposals, including congestion pricing, a "millionaire's tax," a marijuana tax, a stock-transfer tax and even a $3-a-package tax on Amazon deliveries.

There's a reasonable argument for congestion pricing in traffic-glutted Manhattan and for more investment in mass transit. But the Straphangers' long-term vision involves elimination of the automobile, which remains a middle-class staple in the outer boroughs. Their plan would restrict curbside space for cars by building "protected bike lanes on all major arterial streets across the five boroughs," "giving developers incentives to contribute toward sustainable transportation over private vehicle usage," and eliminating parking requirements for new housing.

Activists use euphemisms like "transportation alternatives" and "transportation choices," but at heart their vision is about control. They want to remake the urban infrastructure in their own image: green, moral and in solidarity with the masses -- at least as those masses exist in their imagination.

The new left urbanists' fatal mistake is to view cities as collections of buildings, roads, tunnels and bike lanes. Urbanists can demolish and rebuild physical environments, but they can't pave over the people. Life in a metropolis is simply too complex, too variable and too ephemeral -- it will evade even the most careful planning. Making cities better and more beautiful requires bringing neighbors, developers, employers and governments into the conversation. Thriving cities are built through cooperation, not compulsion.

suspend the rule and set another date—not the eight votes required to do so. Commissioners Jay, Schoonmaker, Richie Beeler and Carson Dailey voted "No."

In the vote to continue the set date of September 3, only Carringer voted "No."

OPPOSITION CONTINUES

Against Tom Boyd's Ancient Lore development on Chapman Highway as Corinne Rovetti spoke in public forum. A member of Knox County Planning Alliance Rovetti said she was speaking as a citizen and charged the development is violating several county codes. She asked the development be postpone or tabled.

She said construction is underway there without approval and cited loopholes in the law that permitted a commercial development in a single family zone.

"It seems a little strange that the state has approved it but the county has not," Rovetti said.

She said the earthwork is proceeding without any oversight and is violating the ridgetop and hillside recommendations. She also charged that workers are trespassing on private property and asked the commission to do something to stop the development.

Ancient Lore is a development in Boyd Hollow and plans for the 40-acre site call for 40 Hobbit-type dwellings, a 150-seat restaurant, a 500-person meeting center and a 1,000-seat outdoor amphitheater.

Matthew Cross, Ancient Lore's chief executive, said the project has received state approval as a commercial development but, thus far, is legally a residential project in the county.

"We will build the village somewhere," he said adding the project is "trying to navigate these different processes."

The Ancient Lore development was not discussed by the commission.

IN OTHER ACTION the commission chose Chris Sharp to serve on the Knox County Air Pollution Control Board. He was selected over two other candidates, Lynn Ludington and Cory Johnson.

The commission gave final approval for the issuance of $37,230,000 in General Obligation Bonds. Also approved, on first reading, was a break for volunteer firefighters that eliminates county fees for the volunteers' vehicle tags. The commission plans to come back and also give the same break to volunteer rescue squad members.

Trees Knoxville was honored for its award from the Southern Group of State Foresters.

Chairman Hugh Nystrom read the resolution, noting the group's efforts in planting trees at various schools and public and private properties.

The Schaad Road Extension Project's Phase 4 was deferred for 30 days as the cost of the project is still being negotiated with Vaughn & Milton Consulting Engineers.

The commission approved a contract with WestRock Converting LLC for recycling services with a note that glass is no longer being accepted because no bidders were found. Glass can be put into the regular trash and will apparently be director, said the mayor had requested a new design. He said the project is being done internally and will be used on publications as needed.

Commissioner Charles Busler questioned the adoption of a new county logo and Rob Link, Mayor Glenn Jacobs' communication

What have you learned at Council?

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

The Knoxville Focus asked the four term-limited Knoxville City Council members what they have learned from their eight years of service. These council members will continue to serve the city until their replacements are selected in November. Here are their replies:

Mark Campen

For the most part I'm looking forward to spending more time with family and friends and focus on my job, possible new career opportunities and more.

I have enjoyed my time on council. The friendships made and services I could bring to certain situations to help people have made it all worthwhile. My experience has been that the vast majority of the time and commitment is spent helping constituents with issues that do not end up in the media. As a council person, that is most often where the rubber meets the road, the tedious and tough to solve issues such as crime, safety, sidewalk needs, speeding, illegal parking, development issues, codes enforcement and much more that no one hears about. In my time on council, those are the most common concerns of what I've tried to deal with and resolve. These issues take much longer than most people have the patience for. Sometimes, there is no resolve.

Currently, I have no aspirations to run for another office, but you never know.....

I thank everyone who has supported me over the past seven plus years.

Thank you for letting me serve you and the 5th District!

Finbarr Saunders

I've learned that Knoxville is an efficiently run city, and the city staff I've come to know are very professional at every level. They really look out after the citizens of Knoxville.

In working with my colleagues, while we don't always agree, we will craft a solution. It is a pleasure working with them. Our citizens generally present their concerns in a respectful manner, with genuine concern for the greater good. We're fortunate to have the kind of dedication we have to this city.

When I leave office, we hope to do a little more travelling, and I'll continue to be active as a community volunteer.

Marshall Stair

It is impossible to write all I have learned in my eight years on Council, but I will start with these three.

Knoxville is on the right track and I am proud of what we have accomplished in the last 8 years. Yes, we must address our challenges, like affordable housing and homelessness, but Knoxville is better than it has ever been in my 41 years, and I am proud to have played a role in its progress the last eight years.

More than anything, people want the city to provide quality services, from fixing potholes, to building sidewalks in neighborhoods, enforcing code violations, to making sure every neighborhood is safe. If the City performs its principal services well, everyone benefits.

The future is bright, we've done a lot, but there are many exciting unfinished projects, from the new Safety Building, to the Urban Wilderness Gateway Park, to the Science Museum, and of course Baseball coming back! The next few years are going to be an exciting time for Knoxville.

George Wallace

I've learned it takes five votes to change anything. You must renew personal commitment to civil discourse daily. You must renew commitment to take each vote independent of the others at every meeting. I've learned the importance of understanding the issue before forming an opinion and the importance of being transparent with constituents on issues.

There is great value in public process and engagement. There are some very talented people working for the City of Knoxville. The Knoxville Police officers and the Knoxville Fire Department risk their lives to protect all every day.

The mayor and city council members work long hours and dedicate a significant portion of their life for the betterment of City of Knoxville.

Mannis wins primary, faces Kincannon in November of the City of Knoxville have shown their confidence in the blueprint that I've been laying for the city's growth and development," he said. "If fortunate enough to be elected your mayor in November, I promise you I will work tirelessly and I will never take one single vote for granted."

While the evening was one for celebration, Mannis acknowledged his opponents, including Marshall Stair (who finished a close third in the primary), Michael Andrews, Calvin Skinner and Fletcher Burkhardt.

"We will now face Indya Kincannon and I know that this is the end of the road for some people," Mannis said. "Those people are all good people and they have been called to serve."

"I've spent time with them over the past year and we might've had some philosophical differences but we all love Knoxville."

For Mannis, the opportunity to be mayor of Knoxville would be a dream come true.

"I've been fortunate to call Knoxville my home for my entire life," he said. "This is a city I love and believe in.

I never dreamed that I would have this opportunity when I grew up in Frog Level, just a short way from where we are tonight."

Mannis, who has run his family business, Prestige Cleaners for nearly four decades, said that customer service has loomed large there and he vowed to take those principles to the mayor's office if elected in November.

"Customer service is what we are about at Prestige Cleaners and our citizens are our customers," he said. "I will make sure that each of our citizens is represented and during our first 100 days, I will implement a program called Kids First.

"I've seen mothers and fathers, aunts and uncles, grandparents and great-grandparents and I want to make sure that we have neighborhoods where our kids can grow and prosper."

The Kids First program is part of Mannis' Knoxville First Initiative, which includes having strong and safe neighborhoods, economic development and vibrancy, healthy citizens and keeping a focus on the people.

Primary by the numbers

In Seat A Lynne Fugate pulled 57.16% of the vote and Charles Lomax Junior got 42.84%. Both will face off again in November.

Seat B saw Janet Testerman trounce David Hayes. Testerman got better than 60% of the votes with Hayes receiving just over 39%.

In the race to replace District 5's Mark Campen Charles Thomas pulled almost 70% of the vote against Charles Al-Bawi who got 30.63%. They, too, will face off in November.

Only 19,116 votes were cast in the mayor's race. Other candidates in that race were Fletcher Burkhardt with 3.09%, Calvin Taylor Skinner with 2.58% and Michael W. Andrews with 1.57%.

The grand total for absentee, early and election day voters was 19,304.

All totals are unofficial until certified by the election commission.

Anders chosen as nominee for E-911 Director

By Mike Steely
 steelym@knoxfocus.com

The personnel committee of the E-911 Board has selected Brad Anders, a Knox County Commissioner and City Police Lieutenant, to recommend to the full board as the next executive director of the agency.

Meeting Thursday morning the committee, chaired by City Fire Chief Stan Sharp and comprised of County

Mayor Glenn Jacobs, City Mayor Madeline Rogero, Police Chief Eve Thomas, Sheriff Tom Spangler, Director Alan Bull and EMT Representative Daron Long, interviewed three candidates recommended by a search committee.

Each candidate's first question, from Chief Sharp, asked if they had anything that a search of their backgrounds would uncover that they would like to disclose.

Jennifer Lanter, director of the Loudon County E-911, mentioned she had been accused of inappropriate behavior with another employee. She said the charge was investigated and no disciplinary action was taken. She said the incident was "blown out of proportion" and said she would be happy to answer questions about it.

Landscape architect to speak at Fountain City Town Hall

By Mike Steely
 steelym@knoxfocus.com

The Fountain City Town Hall has a special program next Monday, September 9, when Garry Menendez will speak. Menendez is a UT Associate of Plant Sciences and a registered landscape architect.

Garry Menendez

The speaker will present how creative design and visualization can improve many of our area's most prized landmarks and create more walkable and bike-friendly neighborhoods.

Kelly Ellenburg, chair of the Town Hall, said Menendez will share some ambitious but attainable goals which will improve the quality of life for all residents.

"Landscape design is sometimes more of what to remove than what to add," Menendez says, adding, "In East Tennessee we are extremely fortunate to have at our fingertips an abundant array of native species that do an amazing job in providing us with a true sense of place."

Ellenburg also announced that a presentation of the Gresham Middle School Academic and Citizenship Awards will follow the speaker's remarks. She also is reminding members that renewals are due. Membership is available to all citizens of the Fountain City area or one can join as an associate member, a non-voting position available to people who are not residents but want to support the Fountain City community.

The meeting of the Town Hall is at 7 p.m. in the Church of the Good Shepherd at 5400 Jacksboro Pike in Fountain City.

The Old Courthouse

It was once the center of activity in downtown Knoxville, Tennessee. The Old Knox County Courthouse located on the corner of Gay Street and Main once housed the courts and offices of elected government officials.

When I started working for Attorneys Zane Daniel (deceased) and John J. Duncan, Jr., in the early seventies, I became familiar with "the Courthouse." It seems unbelievable now, but during those days there were no computers or cell phones for communication. A few years later, the City-County Building was constructed. Its spacious and sprawling design allowed room for many city and county offices to be located in one building. This arrangement helped alleviate cramped quarters in City Hall and the Knox County Courthouse.

Some offices still remain in the Old Courthouse. The City-County Building is now nearly 40 years old and sits in a prime location near the banks of the Tennessee River. Certain vantage points from the streamlined structure provide breathtaking views of the Tennessee River and Knoxville skyline. But there is something about the Old Courthouse that cannot be duplicated in buildings of the modern era. The old red brick building has a certain architectural charm about it, and it is a wealth of history. Indeed, the Old Courthouse is a Knoxville treasure.

Harmony Family Center Announces First Annual Pickleball Tournament

Harmony Family Center will host their Inaugural "Volley for Change" Pickleball Tournament September 20-22 at the Knoxville Racquet Club.

The tournament is a USAPA-sanctioned event and the schedule offers something for everyone. Friday, September 20, will include the mixed doubles age competition. On Saturday, September 21, competitions will include men's and women's skills and men's and women's age group. And finally, on Sunday, September 22 is the mixed doubles skill competition.

All games are win by two and brackets of six teams or higher will be double elimination while brackets of five teams or fewer will be round robin. The Knoxville Racquet Club is an indoor facility with 16 courts and all participants will use the DuraFast 40 ball.

"This is a great opportunity for us to expand our event programming while raising money for the children we serve," said CEO/Founder Pam Wolf. "We are proud of our tagline: 'Now, Helping Kids Can Be a Ball. A pickleball.' And, we are looking forward to having Pro Player and gold medalist, Stephanie Lane, involved with this initial tournament."

The registration fee is $50 and the final deadline to register is September 6, 2019. Early registration is encouraged because the event is limited to 600 participants and will sell out. All events are included in the fee. Additionally, all registered participants will receive a special chair and will have the opportunity to bid on a signed authentic pickleball paddle from Barney McCallum who is the original inventor of the sport.

PYA Waltman Capital is this year's title sponsor and Mercedes of Knoxville is also participating as a corporate sponsor. Additionally, Ole Smoky Moonshine will be providing their new Moonshine Pickles during the event. To learn more or to register, please visit www.harmonyfamilycenter.org.

attention of the Mayor and City administration;

- Propose responses and solutions to address these concerns; and
- Serve as a sounding board for City initiatives and proposals affecting neighborhoods.

"Members of the Neighborhood Advisory Council are valuable eyes and ears in the community," says Office of Neighborhoods Coordinator Debbie Sharp. "They know their neighborhoods' histories and unique characteristics, which makes them ideal partners in the City's efforts to serve and strengthen Knoxville's neighborhoods."

NAC's 15 members serve three-year terms, with the option to reapply and serve two consecutive terms. NAC comprises two members from each of the six City Council districts and three at-large representatives. Except for the citywide seats, all applicants must live in the district for the seat they are applying for.

Five NAC seats expire in December, and Mayor Madeline Rogero will appoint the new members before she leaves office. The expiring seats, districts and current members are:

- Seat 1-A (Fort Sanders and South Knoxville) – Danny Gray
- Seat 2-A (West Knoxville) – Donnie Ernst

- Seat 3-B (Northwest Knoxville) – Anna Compton
- Seat 6-B (Downtown and East Knoxville) –Terrell Patrick
- At Large Seat B (citywide) – Travetta Johnson

"My time on the NAC has given me the opportunity to meet and work with community leaders from all parts of the city," says Danny Gray, who began serving in January 2015. "I have learned a great deal about the challenges they face in their neighborhoods, but I've also seen how many issues we have in common."

Gray adds that he's gained insight and knowledge about how city government operates and meetings with department heads have been "informative and productive."

Terms for the five oncoming members will run January 2020 through December 2022.

Application forms, more information on the NAC and a list of current members are posted on the Neighborhood Advisory Council page of the City's website. Send completed application forms to Debbie Sharp via email at dsharp@knoxvilletn.gov or by mail at P.O. Box 1631 Knoxville, TN 37901, by 4:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 6. To request a hard copy be mailed to you, call the Office of Neighborhoods at 865-215-3232.

Anders chosen as nominee for E-911 Director

Richard Holbert, communications manager for Rural/Metro AMR, answered the question by saying, "Absolutely not, I Google myself often."

Brad Anders, who sits on the main E-911 Board as a citizen representative, said there have been two incidents while on the police force, one of which he said he made a mistake and charges were dismissed.

After a series of questions about their experience, what they would do as director, and how they would deal with employee relations the committee met without the nominees.

Lanter's answer was checked briefly by Chief Thomas and Mayor Rogero and Rogero read a Loudon newspaper account from March 1, 2017. The story dealt with a cell phone conversation or text between Lanter and City Police Chief Don White and said that Lanter was given a "verbal warning."

Mayor Jacobs wondered what went on in the text between Lanter and the other party and sited "public perception" of the candidate. Chief Thomas said, "This is swirling around Jennifer," but also reminded the fellow members that Lanter said she would answer the question if asked.

Sheriff Spangler said it was a "tough decision" but added the incident "puts a cloud over it." He asked if the committee was willing to forgive.

Mayor Rogero reminded the committee they were "talking in a public arena to make a decision." She later said the directorship position comes down to leadership ability.

Holbert's position with AMR came into question as to whether he would favor them as director and it was noted that working for a corporation is different than work in the public sector.

"I've worked with Brad on commission. He's very detailed oriented. I don't know Richard (Holbert) very well, said Mayor Jacobs and he recommended Brad Anders as director saying he is suited for the position.

Chief Thomas sited Anders as a leader in his position with the city police department and Chief Sharp said Anders has been active and engaged as a E-911 board member.

Daron Long said he was basing his decision on Rogero's remarks and his own 27 years with the fire department.

A roll call vote saw a unanimous recommendation of Anders with Holbert as an alternative candidate. Bull abstained from voting. A more thorough background search will be made before presenting it to the full E-911 board and a decision on a contract and proposed salary offer will be made prior to that meeting.

Attorney Don Howell said the recommendation of Anders may be made by late September.

The 1958 Senate Race in Tennessee, III

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill
rayhill865@gmail.com

Prentice Cooper, former three-time governor of Tennessee, had been on the comeback trail in a crowded primary election to win the Democratic nomination to claim his residency in the governor's mansion. While some might have discounted the wealthy former governor's chances of winning the nomination, nobody really knew just how the race would play out. At least two strong candidates, Buford Ellington and Andrew "Tip" Taylor, worried that Cooper's candidacy would take votes from their own campaigns. Ellington, Commissioner of Agriculture in the administration of Governor Frank Clement, was thought to be the candidate of the Clement organization, while Taylor served as a judge in West Tennessee and had been elected to a seat on Tennessee's Railroad and Public Utilities Commission in 1946.

Cooper had long entertained senatorial ambitions and when he withdrew from the governor's race to challenge incumbent Senator Albert Gore in June of 1958, virtually everybody knew it would be a real race. Cooper had been out of elected office since 1945, yet he was the only person to be elected to three consecutive two-year terms as governor in Tennessee's modern history. Nor was Albert Gore an especially easy target. Gore had impressive political skills and credentials of his own. Unlike Estes Kefauver's victory in 1948, Gore had not relied upon a divided primary field to claim victory. Gore had challenged Tennessee's longest serving United States senator in the primary, Kenneth D. McKellar. McKellar was about as entrenched as any senator could possibly be and McKellar's alliance with his personal friend and political partner E. H. Crump, leader of the Shelby County political organization, allowed him to dominate Tennessee politics for decades. Gore later recalled most Tennesseans had affection and respect for McKellar, but the senator was eighty-three years old and seeking an unprecedented seventh term as he was ailing. Gore cleverly pitched his campaign on a high plane, refusing to personally criticize the veteran senator and stressing a theme of looking to the future. Certainly McKellar was enormously powerful in the nation's Capitol, but he was also eighty-three years old, frequently sick and seeking another six-year term. Few Tennesseans disputed the fact K. D. McKellar could do more for Tennessee in the United States Senate, but the forty-four year-old Gore could also accrue seniority in Washington. Gore won and earned the reputation as something of a giant-killer. Gore could be charming when he wished to be and was an excellent speaker and made a favorable impression out on the stump. The diminutive former governor Prentice Cooper was a far less able speaker, nor was he as entertaining on the stump as he maintained a sincere and dignified demeanor while campaigning. Cooper, like McKellar before him, also was credited with a peppery personality and a distinctly fiery temper. The race for the 1958 Democratic nomination for the United States Senate pitted two candidates with very different ideologies against one another. Prentice Cooper was a figure from the past, while Albert Gore still represented the future. Cooper was insistent upon keeping things as they were in Tennessee, while Albert Gore realized Tennessee and the South must make progress for all people. Gore was unabashedly progressive in most of his thinking, while Prentice Cooper was unapologetically conservative.

Much of the 1958 campaign for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate involved race, a rarity in Tennessee's political history. Senator Gore charged a local insurance executive, Justin Potter, with attempting to locate a photograph of a young African-American man who had sought to be appointed to the West Point military academy. Gore claimed Potter wanted the picture to exploit for political purposes the charge the young man had been appointed to West Point by the senator. Potter hotly denied the accusation, although Gore was quick to say he had never appointed any African-American youngsters to West Point. The senator did confirm he had nominated two young African-American men from Memphis to attend the Air Force academy. Potter angrily denied Gore's charge and accused the senator of "demagoguery" and attempting to make political hay of his own. Potter wrote, "Speaking personally, it is my firm conviction that the good people of Tennessee, whatever their race, have no desire to serve as stepping stones for your political ambitions." Potter did not deny, however, that he was supporting Prentice Cooper. Senator Gore's retort to Justin Potter was both humorous and effective. The senator invited Potter to join Tennessee's Democratic party and suggested the executive start by attending a $5 per plate barbecue to be held in Nashville. Gore noted Potter had donated $5,000 to the Republican party during the 1956 campaign, with another $1,000 coming from Potter's wife. Both Senator Gore and former governor Cooper were on hand at the barbecue, circulating through the crowd, shaking hands.

One resident of Nashville wrote a letter-to-the-editor of the Nashville Tennessean tartly suggesting, "Mr. Tennessee, while Albert Gore realized Tennessee and the South must make progress for all people. Gore was unabashedly progressive in most of his thinking, while Prentice Cooper was unapologetically conservative. Much of the 1958 campaign for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate involved race, a rarity in Tennessee's political history. Potter did not deny, however, that he was supporting Prentice Cooper. Senator Gore's retort to Justin Potter was both humorous and effective. The senator invited Potter to join Tennessee's Democratic party and potential weakness in West Tennessee and he spoke in Lexington to cotton farmers. It was partly Senator Gore's answer to Prentice Cooper's criticism of "global giveaways." Cooper had been critical of Gore's support for reciprocal trade agreements, which had been almost scared to the late Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Gore's political mentor. Hull had been virtually obsessed on the topic of reciprocal trade agreements and even President Franklin D. Roosevelt would almost roll his eyes when the Secretary of State began a lecture on the topic. Gore pointed out trade agreements helped Tennessee farmers, whose products were bought and sold to foreign countries. Without foreign purchases, Senator Gore told his listeners, the cotton program would have been cut back repeatedly. If Gore won the support of cotton farmers, Prentice Cooper had the backing of most textile manufacturers, whose hatred for foreign trade was palpable. Gore readily acknowledged he was running "like a bear was after me." While speaking in Byrdstown, Tennessee, Gore made the case he was merely following a course first navigated by Cordell Hull. Hull was still revered in many quarters in Tennessee and remembered as America's longest serving Secretary of State. While speaking at the Pickett County courthouse, Gore reminded his audience many of his votes in the Senate were simply following the principles of Cordell Hull. "I certainly have not turned my back on the people of Tennessee," Gore said.

Gore had represented Tennessee's Fourth District in Congress for fourteen years, the same Congressional district Hull had represented for decades. Gore once again defended reciprocal agreements while speaking in Livingston and tied them to Hull. In case anyone happened to miss the point, Senator Gore made a pilgrimage to the log cabin where Cordell Hull had been born. Gore pointed out when Hull had first become Secretary of State and pushed his many reciprocal trade agreements, Tennessee agriculture had been the first beneficiary of Hull's programs. Gore ticked off textiles, chemicals and wood products as examples of industries that had profited from Cordell Hull's policies, which he continued to support in the Senate.

While he was certainly labeled a reactionary by the Tennessean, Prentice Cooper recognized the importance of women and named Mrs. W. M. McCallum of Henderson as chairperson of his campaign's women's division. Mrs. McCallum had been Tennessee's mother-of-the-year in 1952, as well as a former president of the American Legion's auxiliary. Mrs. McCallum directed the activities of the women's division from Cooper's state headquarters in the Hermitage Hotel. Some of Cooper's other appointments were a reminder of the past. Cooper named James Hardin of Greeneville as his campaign manager; Hardin had been Cooper's chief assistant throughout much his time as governor. Cooper named W. H. Turner as co-chairman of his senatorial campaign; Turner had been an elected member of the state Railroad and Public Utilities Commission while Prentice Cooper had served as governor.

Prentice Cooper formally opened his campaign for the United States Senate in Murfreesboro. Both Albert Gore and Prentice Cooper lived in Middle Tennessee and the area would be a battleground for the two inside the Democratic primary. The sixty-two year old former governor traveled across the state with his family frequently in evidence. Cooper and his wife Hortense were photographed in Memphis with their youngest son, John who was being managed by his mother while his father sat sternly beside her. Even the Tennessean had to admit the youngster was a "scene stealer with long curls."

Cooper attempted to refute Albert Gore's argument about reciprocal trade and revived the spirit of the late Senator McKellar. Prentice Cooper attempted to draw a parallel between himself and McKellar, saying the senator would "never have gone around saying there was serious unemployment or breadlines in Memphis." It was an odd statement, especially as McKellar had worked hard to pour hundreds of millions of dollars into Shelby County and Tennessee during the Depression. An editorial in the Tennessean chided the former governor, saying Cooper apparently had gone "supersonic" as he evidently believed "that with Tennessee voters sound travels faster than light."

Prentice Cooper's formal opening of his campaign in Murfreesboro was carried over a statewide network of radio stations. Cooper launched a pointed attack on the record of Senator Albert Gore, centering his themes on civil rights and Gore's support for foreign aid. "My opponent, on his record, has shown that he stands for integration," Cooper thundered. "You know that I stand for Tennessee and our Southern way of life." The former governor claimed Albert Gore's voting record "is sapping the life blood out of our nation." Apparently Senator Gore's constant references to Cordell Hull had resonated with Prentice Cooper, who at one point mentioned "my friend...Cordell Hull." Saying he believed in fair treatment for all races, Cooper said, "I am unalterably opposed to our children being forced to attend racially mixed schools...The best interests of both races will be served by preserving racial integrity." It is only fair to say despite what one might think, Prentice Cooper was no rabid bigot in the context of his time. Cooper had represented an African-American man charged with rape when no other lawyer would represent him. Prentice Cooper had also helped the man to escape when the mob was so infuriated they burned down the Bedford County courthouse.

The race between Albert Gore and Prentice Cooper would only become more heated as the primary election drew closer.

156 years ago this week...

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

One hundred and fifty-six years ago, on the first week of September, something happened in Knoxville that turned the tide of the Civil War in our state.

On September 3 Union General Ambrose Burnside rode into town and was greeted by a large cheering crowd. The day before General S. P. Carter had taken the town for the North, capturing it without a battle as Confederate forces retreated to near Charleston, Tn.

Despite a gallant effort the Confederate forces failed to retake Knoxville and, for the remainder of the war, East Tennessee was firmly in Northern hands except for a few battles. Burnside quickly fortified several places in and around the town including Fort Dickerson and Fort Sanders. He also had other places set up for guns, supplies, and outposts. Knoxville had been occupied by Rebel forces since the state joined the Confederacy. East Tennessee voters had chosen to stay in the Union but middle and west Tennessee carried the vote. Union loyalists, called "Lincolnites" fled the area when controlled by Confederates and those families included the Hume, Nelson, Maynard and Brownlow kin.

Many Knoxville business leaders had sided with the Confederacy and the fall of Knoxville saw those businessmen and their families, including the Mabry and Ramsey families, leaving the area until after the war.

Burnside's capture of East Tennessee began with a huge march from Kentucky through the Cumberland Mountains, exiting through the Wartburg area and entering the Tennessee Valley to march toward Knoxville. He basically followed a path taken earlier by Carter's raid on the region.

Before leaving Kentucky Burnside ordered Colonel John Decourcy's forces to infest the Cumberland Gap region to the north. The general planned to make a trip to the gap and possibly accept the surrender of the Confederates in person, ordering Decourcy to stand down until he got there.

Decourcy disregarded orders and marched his small force, in view of the Confederates atop the gap, down the nearby Log Mountains, up again, and back down. It made his force look much larger than it actually was. He then demanded surrender and the Confederates gave up but not before the cavalry there galloped into Southwest Virginia and evaded capture.

Burnside was furious and had Decourcy arrested, leading to the resignation of Decourcy, who returned to his native England.

Leaving the Confederate forces at Cumberland Gap surrounded by the Union Army, Burnside moved into Knoxville. The Unionists and estranged women that remained in the city organized a welcome party and more than 500 attended. American flags and provisions hidden from the Confederates were brought out for the event.

The most notable of the attacks of Confederate forces attempting to retake Knoxville were the Battles of Union General Ambrose Burnside was welcomed with a large crowd of cheering Union supporters after two years of Confederate occupation. When Knoxville fell it remained in Union hands through the rest of the war.

Fort Sanders and Campbell took place in Greeneville, Station. Other fights and Bean Station, Bulls Gap and skirmishes in the region Blue Springs.

and some other interests.

Tell us a bit about your family.

I came to Knoxville from a farm in Middle Tennessee to go to UT in 1968. I married a Knoxville girl in 1973. We have one daughter, a son-in-law, a grandson, and a granddaughter.

What are your hopes for the city and county?

I would hope we can grow smarter in many areas. We have a record of residential, and sometimes industrial, growth occurring before adequate infrastructure is in place, particularly roads/transportation. Effective long range planning is tough, but so needed.

What are your main hobby or interests?

I support my wife's in-home craft business. Because our daughter and son-in-law are teachers, we help deliver and pick-up the grandkids at school, dance class, football and basketball practice. After Granddaddy-do's, Daddy-do's, and Honey-do's, my Bo-do's include Jail Ministry, genealogy, wood-working, and activities as a tribute artist with The Andy Griffith Show Re-run Watchers Club in the area and in Mt. Airy, NC. as the Briscoe Darling character from the show.

What do you see as your main accomplishments in life?

I was the first from my family to graduate from high school and I have a couple degrees from UT. One of my granddaddies told me, "You won't learn it all in school" when I left home and that's so true. I have been very fortunate with good health, great family, old friends, new friends, built on a solid Christian foundation laid in Giles County. To have lived 69 grateful years full of good memories is an accomplishment.

How do you think other people see you?

Our culture "labels" folks so quickly today. I hope those that "know" me will "see" me as a sincere, caring individual that loves to laugh, loves people, and loves the Lord.

If you had to do anything over in life what would that be?

Nothing really. There are many relatively small decisions over the years that I might have done better. I could have gone to a smaller college and played football, but my wife says we would have never met, if I had. So, I certainly don't regret that.

If you had one thing in your life that is very satisfying what would that be?

Being the "head" of a stable, loving family. I had numerous positive role models growing up in my family, including my in-laws. I am very grateful.

What's your favorite meal or place to eat?

We eat out regularly and have a regular rotation of restaurants. But, my wife is the best cook. My favorite is meat loaf, cast iron skillet fried corn, pinto beans, corn bread, hunk of onion, and her sweet tea. Topped off with a slice of her strawberry cake, it's the best.

How would you like to be remembered?

As a man who tried to live by The Golden Rule and made his family proud.

Quick-striking Bobcats foil Fulton's upset bid, 13-12

By Steve Williams

It happened oh so quickly. In the blink of an eye, Central's football team moved past upset-minded Fulton 13-12 in the Battle of Broadway Friday night at Bob Black Field.

The young Falcons, coming off a 42-3 season-opening loss to South-Doyle, had taken a 12-0 lead on Jose Mojica's second 35-yard field goal midway through the third quarter.

But with a flip of the switch, the Bobcats came alive. Braden Gaston returned the ensuing kickoff 80 yards to score and teammate Deontae White picked off a first-down pass six seconds later to set up Central at the Fulton 35-yardline.

Senior quarterback Dakota Fawver cashed in the field position with a 15-yard touchdown pass to Isaiah Osborne, which put the Bobcats ahead and proved to be the game winner.

"We're pleased with the result, but not pleased with how some things happened," said Central Coach Bryson Rosser.

"It's a game that you expect. It's the Battle of Broadway. Guys playing hard. Very similar teams. Great coaching staffs. It could have gone either way. We're just happy that it went our way obviously at the end."

It was the 55th Battle of Broadway. The Bobcats lead the all-time series with a record of 34-19-2. Fulton has won five of the last eight meetings.

Central, which captured the TSSAA Class 5A state championship last season and opened the 2019 campaign with a 51-20 win over Cleveland, has now won 15 games in a row.

"It hurts to lose, but after last week's performance and this week's performance, we have to feel a little bit better and like we took a step in the right direction," said Fulton Coach Rob Black.

"I'm proud of our team and our effort. Obviously, we've got to play a lot cleaner than that. But I don't leave the field discouraged, I leave disappointed."

third quarter, Fulton responded with a drive to the Central 22. But on third-and-two, Makhi Anderson sacked Falcons junior quarterback Tommy Sweat for a 13-yard loss. The final play of the third quarter not only denied the Falcons a huge first down, it pushed them out of field goal range and forced a punt.

Prior to that crucial third down play, Black had called a timeout. But the play he called never developed as he had hoped.

"We felt like they would have everyone in the box right there, so we were going to try and run a little play action and hit our tight end on a quick one," recalled Black. "They did a good job of holding him up on the line of scrimmage and we weren't able to get off."

In the fourth quarter, Fulton threatened again. But on second-and-eight at the Central 16, Jaidin Horton intercepted Sweat's pass at the goal line.

The Bobcats muffed a punt later in the quarter, but Tyler Bost made a big recovery for Central at its 31-yardline with 3:45 remaining.

Out of timeouts, the Falcons would have to stop Central to get the ball back. But Fawver scrambled 11 yards on third-and-four to pick up a first down. He only had to take a knee a couple of times to run out the clock.

Westbeats Farragut 24-13

By Alex Norman

The West Rebels could not have asked for a better start to the 2019 season.

Six days after defeating rival Bearden in overtime, the Rebels went on the road and knocked off another Knox County Class 6A rival. On Friday, August 30, West defeated Farragut 24-13, serving notice to the rest of the state that the Rebels will be a contender this year in Class 5A.

"I'm so proud of our kids and the way they worked. They changed the culture of our football program and the culture of our school," said West head coach Lamar Brown. "They just have a lot of heart... We lost a bunch of football games like the last two last year and our kids battled. They are gonna fight to the end. I'm just proud of them."

"It means a lot to me and it means a lot to us as a team," said junior running back Isaiah Mattress. "We are going to go out and keep winning. Our goal is to go undefeated."

In the second quarter with Farragut leading 3-0, the Rebels drove down the field and faced third and goal from the Admirals two-yard line. Mattress took the direct snap and attempted to push the ball into the end zone around the left side of the Farragut (1-1) line. Mattress fought his way through Ads defenders and then stretched the football into the end zone, giving West a 7-3 lead with 3:07 to go in the first half.

The Admirals responded with a drive deep into West (2-0) territory, but had to settle for a Simeon Sharp field goal, his second of the night. West took a 7-6 lead into the locker room.

"The turning point of the game was holding them to two field goals in the first half," said Brown. "It seemed like every time we needed a play on defense we made a play. We have a lot of playmakers there but it was a total team effort."

Early in the third quarter, the Ads finally solved the Rebels defensive riddle when running back Matt White broke free up the middle with a 48-yard scamper, making it 13-7 Farragut.

The Admirals defense forced a punt, but when the kick was muffed and recovered by West, the Rebels had a chance to

Road to Fame's first class to be recognized Friday at Halls game

By Steve Williams

It'll be a special evening at Halls High School this Friday.

The inaugural class of the Halls High Athletics' Road to Fame will be recognized at halftime of the Red Devils' football game versus Clinton.

The 12 inductees are Tammy Eicholz Akard (volleyball), Donnie Cooper (golf), Ashley Cox (girls basketball), Dean Craig (baseball), Randy Hall (football), Jason Julian (football), James Ralph "Red" McMillan (football), Missy Rutherford (track), Russ Rutherford (baseball), Stephanie Humphrey Sayne (softball), Cameron Sharp (boys basketball) and Chris Vandergriff (wrestling).

McMillan will be honored posthumously.

The honorees and their families, along with special guests, will meet at 5:30 in the lobby of the Halls gymnasium, where they will watch and hear a presentation of the athletic accomplishments of the Road to Fame's first class on a new electronic video board that was recently installed.

Afterwards, the honorees will be escorted to the football field and a 20 by 20 foot tent area, where they will enjoy pregame refreshments and watch the game. Halls Head Football Coach Scott Cummings also will speak to the inductees at 6 o'clock, said Jerry Julian, Road to Fame president.

"We've had a tremendous amount of excitement and interest in the first class, and we plan to start accepting nominations for the 2020 class on Oct. 1 and through Dec. 15," said Julian.

Nomination forms will be available at Hallsdale / Powell Utility, Phil Nichols Insurance, Home Federal Bank in Halls and Halls High School.

Nominees remain in consideration for selection to the Road to Fame for five years. Persons are not eligible to be nominated until five years after graduation.

In addition to Halls High athletes, coaches and other persons associated with the school's athletics program may be nominated in the "other" category, said Julian.

There will be six new inductees selected for the 2020 class and four per year thereafter.

Julian also emphasized that nomination forms must be filled out completely.

A LOOK AHEAD: Top attractions on the Week 3 high school football schedule include Sevier County at Central, Gibbs at South-Doyle and Powell at Fulton. Please see Prep Football "focus" for the schedules and scores of all local teams on Page C4.

WES' HOMECOMING: Wes Jones, the only head football coach Hardin Valley ever had until he resigned this past spring to take an assistant position at Science Hill in Johnson City, will be on the "other" side when the Hilltoppers visit HVA for a Region 1-6A game Friday night.

CONGRATULATIONS: Former Webb School football standout Andrew Craig, who has been a "walk-on" player at Tennessee, was put on scholarship at UT last week. Craig said he grew up a Vols fan and it was like a dream come true. David Meske, Craig's head coach at Webb, said: "Andrew was an outstanding player at Webb. It does not surprise me that he earned a scholarship at UT because of his work ethic. We are all so proud of him."

LONG NIGHT: Dan Hammonds, Greeneville head football coach, was asked what time his team arrived back at its high school after the lightning-delayed game Aug. 22 at Powell.

"About 2:15 in the morning," replied Hammonds. "Latest of my coaching career for sure."

The Rivalry Thursday TV game started close to 9 p.m. and ended about five minutes before midnight.

Incidentally, Powell won that game 19-17, probably making that bus ride home to Greeneville even a little longer.

Vikings head coach looking forward to tough schedule

By Steve Williams

Tennessee School for the Deaf is eager to play some football. It's something it's been doing since 1892, but not much of lately.

TSD didn't field a team in 2017 due to a shortage of players and the Vikings got to play only four games last season under new head coach Jordan Cooper after two games were cancelled because of hurricane weather.

TSD's player numbers are up this year and Cooper expects to have a roster of 18 for Thursday night's season opener at South Haven Christian School, which is located in Springfield, north of Nashville.

South Haven lost its season opener against Franklin Christian Academy 24-18 on Aug. 10 and the Patriots were scheduled to host Lighthouse Christian of Antioch Friday night, so they will already have two games under their belts.

The Vikings, who play 8-man football, saw their roster drop to 11 total players in 2018. Their increase in players this year will be very much needed as Coach Cooper said, "This might be our toughest schedule we've had in a long time, but I'm looking forward to it. It's going to be a great challenge for these kids."

In their third full week of practice last week, TSD had enough players for an intra-squad scrimmage at Chambers Field.

The Vikings were 1-3 last season but are expected to be better this fall as they return most of their starters. They are more mature and after what they learned last season, the game is easier for them from a mental standpoint.

TSD FOOTBALL 2019

"We are very junior heavy right now," pointed out Cooper. "We have only two seniors, so next year is looking pretty good as well."

TSD's starting quarterback will be junior Jerry Williams. "He's a very bright young man and can run and control the offense really well," said Cooper, who has been at TSD since 2009 and assisted former head coaches Dick Henley and Barry Swafford.

This TSD squad has some physically gifted athletes, starting with junior Lorenzo Currie, who will be wearing jersey No. 23.

"He is just an all-round, excellent athlete," said Cooper. "I feel confident that if you put him in any hearing school here in Knoxville, they would find a way to put him on the field. He's a very special athlete."

"We have a lot of speed and a lot of athletes," added Cooper, "which is to our advantage playing on an 11-man regulation size field against only eight defenders."

Senior Tristen Davidson will be playing on both sides of the ball for the Vikings, starting out at tight end and linebacker. He also has experience as an offensive tackle and center.

"We're going to move him around this year to wherever we need him," said Cooper. "He's a very versatile player."

Shawn Mould, a junior, stands out on defense.

"For lack of a better word, he's just a nasty player," said the coach. "He likes to hit and loves to tackle. He's not ever going to say, 'No, I can't do this or 'No, I can't do that.' He would run through a brick wall for you. He's one of the most dependable players we've got."

Two other solid juniors include Ri Carylon, who can play in the slot and at running back.

"He's going to get a lot of touches this year as well," said Cooper. "Last year was a good learning year for him, but I think he is starting to get really comfortable with the running back position. I think he can do some good things this year."

The TSD coach also is high on X receiver Malcolm Williamson. "He's going to make some plays this year."

TSD will play a seven-game schedule, including five games against Mason-Dixon Conference foes. All of the deaf schools are playing 8-man football now in the conference, except Alabama, which has indicated it may be in the future.

Alabama, of course, will play the 8-man game when it hosts TSD Sept. 19.

"The Alabama game is an awesome rivalry," said Cooper. "All of the alumni talk about it. I love hearing stories from Coach Swafford about those games."

A new conference opponent on this year's schedule is Florida on Oct. 12. "Nobody here at TSD remembers the last time we played Florida," said Cooper. "They went down to 8-man this year. We'll go there next season, and I think the boys are excited about going to St. Augustine next year."

TSD will host Mississippi in its homecoming game on Sept. 28.

Tennessee School for the Deaf second-year Head Coach Jordan Cooper instructs players during practice Aug. 28. Cooper says he is looking forward to continuing the tradition of TSD football.

strike right back. On that very next play, quarterback Baker Dance found freshman Elijah Rogers in single coverage and went for it. That combination was responsible for the game-winning touchdown in overtime against Bearden in the first game of the season. In this situation, it would be a 33-yard pass that was caught for a touchdown, and West took a 14-13 lead. It was a lead they would never give up.

Late in the fourth quarter, the Rebels were up 17-13 and trying to run out the clock. Mattress was ready to do that and more, busting through the Farragut defense for a 90-yard touchdown run. It was now 24-13, which would be the final score.

"I was thinking touchdown all the way," said Mattress. "Get to the end zone and put the game away."

"Isaiah is a big back but he has enough speed to finish the run," said Brown. "When he broke that one tackle I knew he was gone."

"Last week (against Bradley Central) we made plays in the second half... tonight we didn't make enough plays," said Farragut head coach Eddie Courtney. "I think this team is good enough and has enough character. We have to get better each week. I didn't think it would be good to have a bye week after the second ballgame but it might be a good time to have it. Let's us look at a couple of things and go back to the basics."

Farragut's next game will be on Friday, September 14th at rival Oak Ridge. The undefeated Rebels will host winless Karns this coming Friday in their first 5A game of the season.

kickoff return to the 45. A 15-play drive by Central, which included Anderson running for a first down on a fake punt at midfield, reached the Fulton 13-yard-line before stalling.

Joshua Jones got behind the Bobcats' secondary on the Falcons' first possession and hauled in a 74-yard touchdown pass from Sweat. An errant snap on the PAT left Fulton with a 6-0 lead.

Mojica kicked a 35-yard field goal from the left hash mark to boost the Falcons' lead to 9-0 with 3:32 on the second quarter clock.

"I felt like we had the momentum when we came in at halftime and still had it in the second half until we gave up that kickoff return," said Black.

Senior end Eunique Valentine led the Central defense with 8 tackles and 2.5 TFLs. Anderson had seven tackles and one sack. Bost was in on five stops and Kalib Fortner four.

Fulton's defense got a team-high six tackles from cornerback DeRondre Peebles, five from Sweat and four apiece from James Coleman and Indae Walton.

Injured Lady Rebels sweep Fulton in volleyball

By Ken Lay

The 2019 high school volleyball season was less than two weeks old when West High School traveled to Fulton High School.

Still, the Lady Rebels didn't have a full squad as they've been riddled with injuries out of the gate.

"We have five players out and I have one in a walking boot," West coach Jessica Lee said after her team posted a 25-6, 25-22, 25-13 victory over the Lady Falcons Wednesday night at Jody Wright Arena. "Right now, I'm just trying to find combinations so we can play, and tonight I was able to give some kids a chance to play."

Despite the early injury woes, the Lady Rebels left North Knoxville with a win and an 8-3 record and Wednesday's match was a big District 4-AAA sweep of rival Bearden, that match was also on the road.

West, which has struggled in recent years, made great strides last season and is projected to be a contender for the district crown this season. But the Lady Rebels have dropped a four-set district tilt to Oak Ridge, a regular at the Region 2-AAA Tournament.

"The Bearden game was a big win for us," Lee said. "But we had a loss to Oak Ridge, where we came out and didn't have a lot of confidence and they won the first two games.

"We came back and we won the third game and then they got the fourth one."

Confidence certainly wasn't an issue for the Lady Rebels in a toasty gym at Fulton.

Sophie Cain set the tone early for West as she served up six consecutive points to open the match. She also closed the set with five straight including an ace on set point.

She would get plenty of help from her supporting cast. Rylie Valdez had a service run where she scored six points (including four aces) to give the Lady Rebels a 19-5 lead.

West started fast in the second set as it opened a 17-5 advantage but the Lady Rebels got a little careless and Fulton took full advantage of that. The Lady Falcons never led in the set, but hitting errors and lackluster play helped Fulton claw its way back into the fray. Alana Kelly, Kendall Nicely, Hannah Hobby and Taliah Prentice all made big plays to spark the home team's comeback bid. Kelly had an ace that helped the Lady Falcons pull to within 23-21 before West finally took a 2-0 lead in the match.

The Lady Rebels opened a 4-0 lead in the third game thanks to service points from Alisa Elmore and after an ace from Cain; West went up 14-4 and cruised from there.

Lady Bulldogs rout Gallatin in first full match of 2019

By Ken Lay

It's no secret that expectations are lofty for the Bearden High School girls soccer team. But thanks to some inclement weather on match days, the Lady Bulldogs have scarcely been able to even get on the field.

They played their first full game Thursday night and notched a 6-0 win over Gallatin in the first round of the Bearden Invitational at Turner-Allender Field.

It was the first game in nine days for the Lady Bulldogs (2-0), who opened the 2019 season with a 3-0 victory at Cookeville on Tuesday, Aug. 20. The game against the Lady Cavaliers was called just after halftime due to lightning.

Bearden also had its annual regular-season meeting against Hardin Valley Academy postponed due to inclement weather.

But Thursday, the Lady Bulldogs played their first full match. They nabbed an easy victory over a quality opponent.

Bearden's Taylor Cross, who had a hat trick against the Lady Green Wave, hopes that the win is the start of big things to come as the Lady Bulldogs had tournament games at home scheduled against Clarksville and Hendersonville before a tough District 2-AAA opener against Morristown West and a stay in Memphis this weekend at the Rivals Tournament.

"We talked before the game about being fired up to face Gallatin," said Cross, who scored goals in the 39th, 40th and 43rd minutes. "We didn't underestimate Gallatin.

"We approached them as if they were a tough team and they are. Hopefully, this will help us, not only for the rest of the weekend. Hopefully it can help us when we go to Memphis."

Due to the long layoff, Bearden coach Ryan Radcliffe said that he approached the game against the Lady Green Wave (2-2) as if it were the season opener.

"I don't want to say that you saw rust," Radcliffe said. "But you can see the building that we need to do. We made a lot of little mistakes that I tried not to get frustrated about, because this was actually our first game.

"This was our first 80-minute game and it was against a good team and I saw a few good things. I was much more pleased with the way we played in the second half."

Truthfully, Radcliffe couldn't have been all that disappointed with his side's effort over the first 40 minutes.

The Lady Bulldogs withstood an early surge from Gallatin and senior goalkeeper Megan Armstrong had to make a couple of early saves before Bearden heated up.

Bearden moved the ball well as the first five markers were assisted and the last tally, scored by Hailey Cartt, came off a rebound in the 60th minute.

Freshman forward Brinley Murphy wasted little time making an impact in her first home match with the Lady Bulldogs. She scored the first goal of the match in the 15th minute off an assist from senior Abby Brewer.

Bearden extended its lead to 2-0 approximately 10 minutes later when Alex Smith scored. Her goal was assisted by Harlie Howard.

Cross scored three consecutive times with help from Zneyah McLaughlin, Anna Biechler and Smith to make the score 5-0 before Cartt closed out the scoring in the match.

Gallatin coach Greg Harper knew he had a tough opener but said he was disappointed in his team's lack of competitiveness.

"We played well for about the first 20 minutes and we had a couple of chances but we couldn't finish those," he said. "I just don't feel like we competed the way that we wanted to."

Crusty

I once wrote an essay about the modern scourge of AIDS and compared it to the ancient disease we now know as leprosy.

Tremendous progress has been made with both diseases, and with modern medicine there is now the prospect of curing HIV infection, just as antibiotics are used to rid patients of the infectious microorganism causing leprosy.

At the beginning of the AIDS epidemic, I diagnosed and treated the first case of HIV related pneumocystis pneumonia in Knoxville. My patient, Bob, was a prince of a guy, but his immune system had been destroyed by the AIDS virus, and in the 1980s we couldn't save him.

I have never seen a case of leprosy and I'm glad. The infection destroys the nervous system causing the loss of feeling which results in repeated injury and secondary bacterial infections. Leprosy was a horrific disease in antiquity, not only because of the disfigurement it produced, but because those with the disease were considered "unclean" and banished from society. It is probable that not all ancient skin conditions and blemishes were due to leprosy. After all, priests in charge of determining whether a condition was cured and removing the stigma of unclean were not dermatologists.

Recently, my dermatologic skills were challenged. I believe you love your children, but you "worship" your grandchildren. So imagine my concern when I received an iPhone picture from the beach showing my granddaughter's angry skin rash. Fortunately, my diagnosis was not a horrific "flesh-eating" bacterial skin disease, but a variation of impetigo.

I'm sure many of you have seen or heard of this crusty strep and staph bacterial skin condition commonly seen in children. My granddaughter's blister-like rash was a less common variation and generated considerable anxiety in our family's text messaging. Fortunately, granddad's advice led to proper evaluation and successful treatment with antibiotics. And Josie was not ostracized, nor did we have to visit a priest to have a label of "ceremoniously unclean" expunged.

A couple of years ago I learned that healing and curing were different. As a doctor I was always focused on treating my patients with the hope of restoring them to good health. I actually considered a career as an infectious disease subspecialist with the notion that cures were often possible. I'm glad that I chose internal medicine and geriatrics because the AIDS epidemic struck and now infectious disease doctors take care of chronic HIV infection, just as I manage chronic coronary artery disease and diabetes.

In antiquity healing was the goal since there were few medical cures. When "healed" a person was restored to the community and no longer banished. Imagine being sick, disfigured by leprosy and alone. The woman who came to Jesus, hemorrhaging for seven years and likewise "ceremoniously unclean," was cured and healed by the Master and restored to her community and family.

Becky and I just arrived in Portland, Oregon to see the PCOs (Portland Cute Ones). We were in Portland, Maine visiting friends in August, and now on the opposite side of the continent visiting grandkids. As we left the airport we saw the first homeless tents which are so prevalent in Portland, Seattle, Los Angeles and San Francisco. As of this writing, I've seen no evidence of Antifa, although there are lots of crusty people on street corners and in the local Kroger affiliate. We're careful in this foreign land. Last week a man wearing a MAGA hat at a Portland restaurant was severely beaten.

As I strolled, my granddaughter in the neighborhood at nap time, I was curious to see if the ubiquitous virtue signaling yard signs of Portland were still present. They were. Admittedly, the banal slogans trigger in me not anger but revulsion. I recalled the sagacity of Mark Twain who once said, "No amount of evidence will ever persuade an idiot."

I felt the same regarding a crusty virtue-warrior who recently took me to task for my opinions in my column. His comments were inane, but I was polite, and after thanking him for reading my column, I closed by telling him that I would add him to my prayer list. You would have thought I was wearing a MAGA hat from the triggered diatribe!

I am not a formally trained writer. I believe you learn to write by writing, and like most worthwhile endeavors it takes practice. Actually, I fancy my crusty essays as homemade, then rendered presentable by my grammarian wife and editress, Becky.

Grammatical license with crusty language is painfully evident in the media where journalists (?) use misplaced modifiers and sometimes even incorrect verb tense. Admittedly, I have used slang. An example is "woke" instead of awakened. I first heard this phrasing in the urban slang of the black lives matter movement. I'll never be accused of "coolness," preferring classical music to pop and rap "musical" offerings whose lyrics are crusty to say the least.

Admittedly, I am a conservative who favors tradition and slower, more measured change. I'm concerned about the coarsening of our language and culture and the loosening of social mores. One look at my picture will tell you that I am not a cool hipster. I can't identify with the crusty street people of Portland or those under Knoxville's viaduct. In our zeal to not judge, we tolerate disturbed people on the street, drug abuse and eschew constraints on normalcy. I am sympathetic to people who are different, but I do not believe minorities should be the driving force of normalcy or used as victim-tools by pandering politicians.

Perhaps I am just a crusty American traditionalist. I believe in right and wrong and fairness. I believe in the rule of law, and its absence in Washington DC. And I believe in God. History shows what happens when apostasy and functional atheism replaces the Almighty.

Plato once noted that Athenian youth had no respect for their elders and the country was going to the dogs. And I guess it's still going to the dogs, especially in our so-called Justice Department of Washington. Perhaps my observations are just crusty, politically incorrect and obsolete.

November 2020 will decide whether American traditional values are, like me, just crusty and obsolete.

We are better than this

It's time to speak out. All of us are responsible for the actions of our government because (in too many cases it's shameful) we elected the folks who are supposedly representing us. Silence is equivalent to support and alliance with the terrible things that are occurring.

Nearly 700 "illegal immigrants" were rounded up by ICE in a raid in Mississippi last month. Some of these folks have been in the country for more than 10 years. Perhaps they came to this country in an illegal fashion; perhaps they should have been dealt with at that time. However, it is cruel to nab them in some kind of sting operation after they've been in this country

joerector@comcast.net

for so long and have set down roots, built lives, and begun families.

Our government needs to rework the immigration policies and laws to better fit our world. Yet, it shouldn't deport those who have been here for so long. The jobs they work are often ones that no one else wants. The characterization of them as criminals, rapists, and drug dealers comes from people who are trying to whip up fear and anger in an attempt to remain in a political office. Those beliefs are held by extremists who are racists and white nationalist, not Christian.

Christians, by definition, are those who follow the teachings of Jesus Christ. That means they believe in his teaching. He told his followers,

"I was hungry and you gave me something to eat, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you invited me in, I needed clothes and you clothed me, I was sick and you looked after me, I was in prison and you came to visit me."

When they asked him when they had done those things, he replied,

"Truly I tell you, whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers and sisters of mine, you did for me."

Don't kill the messenger here. My intentions are not to deride anyone. I say these things because the fabric of our country is being ripped apart by the fear and anger being sewn by some. The truth is that we will never stop immigration, legal or illegal, from continuing. This country is founded by immigrants; only the native Indians can lay claim to the land.

Yes, the government must develop a sound, logical, and sensible immigration policy. Yes, people should come into the USA legally. What we cannot allow is the government to terrorize families and separate parents from children. That crosses the line that separates decency and cruelty.

From the point that new immigration laws are enacted, officials can quickly process each person to decide if he or she should be admitted. That is the fair way to deal with the situation. It removes politics and angry, scared people from the process.

We are better than this. Our country has for years accepted immigrants. The words on the plaque of the Statue of Liberty charge us with continuing better behavior than what we display now.

"Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free, The wretched refuse of your teeming shore. Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me, I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

Each individual in this country should look at the words of Jesus and from the Statue of Liberty. Are we being true to them? How close or far from them do we fall? What should our next course of action be. The answers to these questions might well determine the kind of country the United States becomes.

Highway Oddities in Pennsylvania

Doggie Dip Day is September 8

It's nearly time for another great "Doggie Dip Day" on Sunday, Sept. 8, 2019, at Inskip Swimming Pool, 4204 Bruhin Road.

Since the City Parks and Recreation Department launched the event in 2010, the highly popular dog-only swim is now a fun way every year to wrap up the summer swimming season.

"We hope everyone will bring their dogs out from 1-5 p.m. for this last bit of summer fun for the community," said Aaron Browning, City Parks and Recreation Deputy Director.

Cost for the event is $5 per dog and per person, with a two-dog maximum for each owner. Owners must keep all dogs under control. All dogs are required to have up-to-date vaccinations, leashes and tags for the event.

Dogs must be spayed/neutered and not in season. Doggie Dip registration forms must be completed for each dog attending.

Attendees can pre-register this weekend at Inskip Pool during open hours: Saturday and Monday, 11 a.m.-5 p.m., and Sunday, 1-6 p.m.

For more information, call 865-687-9919, email rlove@knoxvilletn.gov or visit <http://bit.ly/DoggieDipDay>, where you'll also find a downloadable registration form.

Pennsylvania is a great place to discover covered bridges, some as old as 100 years. This Glessner Bridge in Somerset County is typical of the hand-built structures in the south part of the state.

it appears your vehicle rolls uphill along the route.

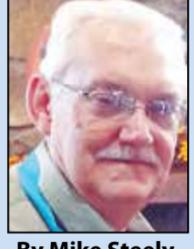

Bedford is just off Interstate 70/76 and not far from the site of the Flight 93 National Monument and the Johnstown, Pa., Flood Museum.

Anyone planning a vacation or travel in the area might want to keep an eye out for unusual landmarks, structures or historic sites. Certainly The Coffee Pot is one of those and anyone in Bedford can direct you to that odd structure. If you keep an eye out for little known attractions or oddities you might discover places you didn't expect to see.

The Coffee Pot is a notable landmark in Bedford, Pa., typical of the unusual attractions communities have rallied and saved. The unusual structure has been a restaurant, bus station and bar over the years and was saved, moved and renovated simply as a local highlight in their community.

A Day Away

By Mike Steely

The website "Roadside America" does a pretty good job of listing unusual attractions, sites, and oddities in our nation and Canada. You can pick a state and take a look at everything from Knoxville's Airplane Filling Station to Alaska's Igloo City.

Making a side trip on any journey sometimes makes the travel better and gives you a chance to get out of the car and stretch. Sometimes the creation, saving and promotion of an odd attraction can be a great benefit for a smaller community. Within our region are several examples such as the historic courthouse in Kingston, the old gasoline station in Tazewell, and the Crockett Tavern in Morristown.

On our vacation, a long camping trip to Canada, we stopped at many of these unusual landmarks, attractions and preserved places. Probably the best example of a community effort to save and promote an odd attraction is a large unusual structure in Bedford, Pennsylvania.

The Coffee Pot was built in 1927 by David Berton

Koontz and served as a diner, bus station and bar over the years. The 18-foot tall metal building, shaped like a huge coffee pot, was closed in 1980 and sat abandoned and deteriorating until 2003 when the Lincoln Highway Heritage Corridor group bought it and moved it to the Bedford County Fair Grounds.

The old Lincoln Highway, stretching from Time Square in New York City to San Francisco, was built in 1913 and was the first transcontinental auto highway in our nation. In the Bedford area there are many other small attractions available free to the public.

Pennsylvania is a haven for anyone interested in covered bridges and Bedford County has 14 of the hand-built structures, some as old as 100 years. The county also has a "Gravity Hill" where

The Mystery of God

The first line of the Bible says: "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth" (Genesis 1:1). We are reminded in this verse how God spoke the universe into existence, and what a universe it is. The diameter of the observable universe is crazy big. Traveling at the speed of light, it would take 93 billion light years to go from one side of the observable universe to the other. We are just taking about what is observable because the universe continues to expand. And since it is expanding, that means it had a beginning point. The theory of the expanding universe was suggested by Edwin Hubble in the 1920s, when he observed that distant galaxies were moving away from us. In 1927, the Belgian Catholic priest, Georges Lemaitre, calculated the Hubble law for an expanding universe and coined the phrase: The Big Bang. God spoke and he created – nothing and then “bang” - something. Up to that point in time, many scientists thought the universe was static and eternal. This was a comfy idea that avoided questions about its origin and creation. But with the knowledge that the universe is expanding, that implies it had a beginning point and forces the question of how it all got here.

By Mark Brackney, Minister of the Arlington Church of Christ

This first line of the Bible is remarkable for sure, but it doesn't tell us something that begs a question. If God made the universe, then who made God? Well, the Bible doesn't tell us. We want the Bible to prove God's existence, but the first words of the Bible simply assume the reality of God without proving it. As I study the Bible, I have many questions, some that remain unanswered. At times that bothers me, but it doesn't need to. You can study the Word of God all your life and never know everything. God has chosen not to reveal some things. Interestingly, as much as Jesus knew about the future, there is one thing even he didn't know. He didn't know about the hour of his return: "But about that day or hour no one knows, not even the angels in heaven, nor the Son, but only the Father" (Mark 13:32). Some things God does not reveal, even to Jesus while he was in the flesh.

The book of Job, I believe, can help us. We find in this book that God does not divulge all the answers Job had. Job asks God again and again why he allows the innocent to suffer. We have thirty-seven chapters of debates between Job and his friends before God finally steps in. But when God shows up to speak, he never answers Job's gut honest questions. Instead, God flips the tables and begins to interrogate Job. God challenges Job to explain the great details of nature and how God planted the foundations of the earth. Job realizes that there is a great gulf between divine and human intellect. What Job wanted to know was beyond his ability to grasp.

In Isaiah 55:9, God said, "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts." If God revealed just a part of his wisdom, it would overwhelm us. Keep in mind that God created everything from the molecular level to galaxies. Volumes have been written to try to describe the workings of just one human cell. There is wisdom and humility to be able to say at times "I don't know." We can be at peace not knowing the mystery of God.

Rosie's World

Biblical Foods

What is the first food mentioned in God's Word? Most people know the story of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, which was full of fruit trees. They were told they could eat all the fruits--except the apple. Then Satan came long and tempted Eve to eat that apple, thus sin arrived in the world.

Another story concerning food was illustrated by the Israelites. They were happy to leave Egypt, but it wasn't long till they were complaining. Not much rain had fallen in the wilderness they were traveling through and the wells and rivers dried up. Not many vegetables were growing. They complained to Moses, "we should have stayed in Egypt; at least we had plenty to eat there." Moses told God about their complaints. God sent manna down to them every morning. It was something like a cracker; it didn't make the Israelites fat, but they didn't starve either.

Finally, they came to Canaan, the land of milk and honey, two very satisfactory foods. And not only that, there were a lot of bushes filled with a little green vegetable--or fruit--called the olive. The Israelites loved the olive, especially since they could suppress the oil from it and use it in many different ways. And, what did Jesus feed his 5,000 worshippers after they listened to his sermon in a field one sunny day? Why, fish, of course.

There is a group of people who don't eat meat. I don't judge them, that is their prerogative, but I firmly believe that God made certain animals for us human to eat. However, be careful. Don't eat too much red meat, it isn't good for you. Our bodies are temples for the Lord. Take care of them; eat foods that are good for you, lots of fruits, vegetables, and many different kinds of wholesome grains. It's OK to have a big Mac once in a while, but don't indulge in those fast-food places too often. I know it's hard to eat sensibly but it's for a worthwhile cause.

Back to the olive, which grows on trees, not bushes, and is a fruit, not a vegetable? Olive oil is one of the main ingredients of Mediterranean cuisine. The Mount of Olives east of Jerusalem is mentioned several times in the New Testament. The allegory of the olive tree in St. Paul's epistle to the Romans refers to the scattering and gathering of Israel. It compares Israelites to a tame olive tree and the Gentiles to a wild olive branch. The olive tree plays an important role in the Bible.

How amazing that God, who does so much for His children, also has time to give them nourishing food? Take advantage of His thoughtfulness, and eat according to the Bible.

Someone asked me if I have as one-track mind. Last week I wrote about bread, now this week I'm writing about food in general, so I guess I do. But I'm not including a recipe this week.

Thought for the day: Truth is not always popular, but it is always right. Anonymous

A native-born Tennessean as president?

By Mike Steely
steelym@knoxfocus.com

There have been three U.S. Presidents from Tennessee, isn't that correct? Andrew Jackson, Andrew Johnson and James K. Polk, right?

Actually all three Tennessee residents were not born in our state. Jackson was born in the Waxhaws area near Lancaster, South Carolina. His home as an adult, The Hermitage, is near Nashville.

Johnson was born near Raleigh, N. C., although a replica of his childhood home is in Greeneville, Tn.

Polk was born in Mecklenburg County, Va. His home, as a child, is in Columbia, Tn.

There have been other Tennesseans that sought the office of president in a primary or general election but none were born in our state. Al Gore Jr., the U.S. Senator from Carthage, Tn., was actually born in Washington, D.C., when his father was in congress.

Hugh Lawson White, a U.S. Senator and son of Knoxville founder James White, sought the office in 1836 but only carried two states, Tennessee and Georgia. White was born in Iredell, N.C., before his father located to Knoxville and built the James White Fort.

You might say that Sam Houston was president of Texas and later governor of that state and that's correct. Houston's family settled in Blount County, Tn., but Houston was born Rockbridge County, Va.

There are others who unsuccessfully sought the office and were actually born in Tennessee. U.

S. Senator Howard Baker sought the Republican nomination in 1980. He was born in Huntsville, Tn.

Estes Kefauver ran in 1952 as a vice presidential candidate with Senator Adlai Stevenson but was defeated. Kefauver was born in Madisonville, Tn.

Senator Lamar Alexander, our state's former governor and national Secretary of Education, sought the office in 1996 and 2000 but lost the nomination. He was born in Maryville, Tn.

Tennessee's Cordell Hull was a presidential candidate in 1928 and was born in Overton County, Tn., in a log cabin. The birthplace has been restored and you can visit it. It is only a few miles north of Sgt. Alvin York's home in Pall Mall near Jamestown.

Will there ever be a U. S. President born in Tennessee?

Senator Bob Corker, a former Chattanooga mayor, is said to be considering a run against President Trump. If that were successful we'd have a Tennessee-born leader, right?

Wrong. Corker was born in Orangeburg, S.C. His family moved to Tennessee when he was 11 years old.

Former Knoxville Mayor and Tennessee Governor Bill Haslam, should he become president one day, would finally put our state on the map of birthplaces. Haslam was born in Knoxville.
