By Mike Steely Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

Western Heights is a Knoxville Community Development Corporation complex near Keith and Western avenues. The KCDC housing project underwent renovation in 2019 and features one-, two- and three-bedroom apartments for low-income residents.

in Knoxville's Phase 2 program and the city council may vote tonight to allocate $4.2 million for more improvements. The Housing and Neighborhood Development is making the request.

The council may also vote to give the Beck Cultural Exchange Center $90,000 per year for the next three years for historical preservation, research, education and programming. The council may also vote to add additional one-year extension periods.

Historic Preservation Program The complex is being updated Awards may also be approved to support qualifying historic properties within the city. The $247,855 is designated for property improvements.

The police department is asking for the mayor to request a federal grant of $44,000 for bullet-resistant vests. The twoyear application would require a 50% match from the city.

Also being requested by the police department is the acceptance of $375,000 from the federal justice department for equipment, supplies, travel and training for the school violence prevention program in county schools. This grant requires a 25% match from the city.

Another grant application request on the agenda is for $3.6 million from the state and federal governments with a 5% city match for community energy efficiency for disadvantaged communities.

The council will also vote on the Capital Improvement Budget, annual appropriations to departments and compensation plans for employees.

Among zoning requests are several requests to increase the number of residential units including allowing residential care facilities as special use in office park zoned areas.

Other increased residential zoning requests have been submitted for properties at Loves Creek, Henson Road, Laurel Avenue, Sevier Avenue, Joe Lewis Road, Beaman Lake Road and Middlebrook Pike.

Non-residential zoning requests are also before the council including a heavy industrial request for Western Avenue. general commercial on North Broadway and neighborhood commercial on Laurel Avenue.

Commission splits on three issues

By Mike Steely Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

The Knox County Commission split 8-3 on three issues involving changes to their meetings and the makeup of the beer board during its regular meeting last week.

Commissioner Courtney Durrett's sweeping changes to commission meetings passed and will begin in June. Commission zoning meetings will now take place on the fourth Monday of each month at 4 p.m. and the commission's monthly work session will now be a brief agenda review meeting.

Durrett said beginning the new schedule next month gives current commissioners a pre-election head start on the new format. The upcoming August general election will seat five new members or seven if the two sitting commissioners are defeated.

Several commissioners chimed into the discussion.

Carson Dailey, term-limited in his office, said the commission shouldn't take any public involvement off any meeting, referring to the "review" meeting that replaces the work session. John Schoonmaker agreed, saying there is a "perception the public is being limited" to public comment.

session? What's the rush?" Schoonmaker asked.

Kim Frazier suggested adding a "public forum" to the end of the zoning meeting to permit any citizen to address any topic they choose.

Rhonda Lee joined Dailey and Schoonmaker in the losing 8-3 vote.

Lee also had several comments on the reorganization of the beer board on a suggestion by the Rules Committee. Gina Oster and Durrett successfully pushed for the vote to have the beer board committee decreased to seven members, not the entire 11-member commission. The reorganization would permit any member with a religious objection to the sale of beer to choose not to serve in the group. The new rule would also have every beer permit or violation punishment be decided by a roll call vote.

"Then why change it?" Lee asked, "What's wrong with the work adding, "This is to prohibit my community from having a vote."

Oster said that prohibiting religious belief is not the intent of the language and the change "is not personal." She said commissioners should not have to sit on a board they don't believe in. Currently, Lee and Richie Beeler both abstain or are silent on permit votes but often vote on fines for illegal beer sales to minors.

Beeler told the meeting the change is "the most desirable for someone in my position in my pastoral Continue on page 3

Knox County Commission passes $1.1 billion budget

May 28, 2024 PAGE A2 The Knoxville FOCUS Hillary Clinton And Left-Wing Want To Imprison Opponents

From a distance

duncanj@knoxfocus.com

Unfortunately, I have heard the bitter Hillary Clinton on two recent newscasts. On the first, she said it would be dangerous to re-elect Donald Trump as president because he would try to "imprison his opponents."

Talk about the pot calling the kettle black. Mrs. Clinton and the left-wing establishment have been trying to do that to Trump and some of his supporters for at least the last couple

Maybe she is so filled with hatred for Mr. Trump and so blinded by political partisanship that she does not realize she is guilty of the very thing she was

charging against him. On the second newscast, she said the trial against Trump in New York is about "election interference."

Well, let's talk about election interference. Hillary Clinton hurriedly deleted 30,000 emails that even the very pro-Clinton New York Times said "may have been a violation of federal recordkeeping regulations."

The liberal British newspaper, The Guardian, reported on March 31, 2022, that "Hillary Clinton's 2016 presidential campaign and the Democratic National Committee have agreed to pay $113,000 to settle a Federal Election into whether they violated campaign finance law by misreporting spending on research that eventually became the infamous Steele dossier."

The Federal Election Commission ruled that Mr. Trump did not violate federal campaign finance laws in the Stormy Daniels matter because personal money was used and not one penny came from campaign funds.

Yet, Hillary Clinton was let off many years later with a fine, not even out of her own pocket, while Trump has to spend millions and go through an arrest and a very long trial.

This is why most Republicans feel there are two standards of "justice" in this country today.

Any fair, unbiased judge would never have allowed ing Trump with violations of a business records law.

Ms. Daniels should have been asked, "Do you understand the charges here are for filing false business records? In your brief time with the defendant, did you or he say anything at all about business records? Realizing you cannot testify about what anyone else told you or you heard on the news, do you have any personal knowledge at all about these records? Have you ever seen any of these records or know anything about who filled out these records or reports?"

Judge Merchan and most of the national media simply wanted to embarrass and/or destroy Mr. Trump with all this trash.

Actually, the biggest womanizers in the White Commission investigation all the salacious sexual evi- House have been Demo- experts" who signed an ad dence into the case charg- crat heroes like Bill Clinton, John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson.

> The false Steele Dossier mentioned above was used to defraud the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, a very serious matter indeed, but nothing was ever done about that.

It led to the two-year multi-million dollar Mueller investigation in which 18 lawyers who apparently hated Mr. Trump were not able to find any Russian collusion with the Trump campaign.

The lead lawyer of those 18 is a far-left partisan who should be embarrassed, but instead is a regular on MSNBC discussing this ridiculous business records case.

And talk about election interference, the prize goes to the 51 "intelligence saying the Hunter Biden story was a Russian hoax and was false.

Everyone knows now the charges against Hunter Biden (based in part on information from his laptop) were true.

I saw two different polls after the 2020 election in which 10% in one poll and 17% in the other said they were Biden voters who would not have voted for him if they had known the stories about Hunter Biden were true.

Actually, Hunter Biden was the one colluding with Russians, Chinese and Ukrainians to the tune of millions of dollars - some of which appears to have gone to Joe Biden himself before he was president.

The Accidental Speaker and Other Thoughts

A recent article in The Washington Post was entitled "Mike Johnson, the Accidental Speaker, is among the most consequential." I was wondering how Johnson is "the most consequential" in his short time as speaker. Given his razor-thin majority and the factiousness of the Republican caucus, I admire his being able to get anything done. But what has he done that the Post is so praiseworthy of? He has passed a government funding bill, reauthorization of the foreign surveillance law, aid for Ukraine, legislation to seize Russian assets and a ban on TikTok. The Wall Street Journal also has praise for Johnson for these items as well.

However, none of them are on the bucket list of items most of us deem they have recently passed important: the southern a bill to stop Biden from haroldblackphd.com gas and oil, the natural gas pause, the EV mandates, growth in federal spending, the explosion of federal debt, Title IX rewrite, and the woke military. Where is Johnson on these issues? How can he be "most consequential" if he has only shepherded through the easy stuff? As I have said before, all of the hard issues have been left for the Republican AGs to fight via lawsuits against the federal government. The Republicans in Congress are busily just rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic. Consider that border, infla- withholding weapons to the Americans with Disabil-Israel - a bill that has no chance of being signed into law. They passed a law to stop hidden junk fees on ticket sales. They passed a law to expand the definition of antisemitism and one to condemn calls to defund the police. Whoopie.

> At govtrack.us. you will see that there are 15,114 bills and resolutions currently before Congress. Thank goodness that only about 7% will become law. On May 17, 2024, there were 16 bills and resolutions on the congressional calendar. Not a single one of them dealt with any critical item. Not one. Rather you have Republicans introducing the WIPPES Act (to require the Federal Trade Commission to issue regulations requiring certain products to have "Do Not Flush" labeling), The Think Differently Transportation Act (to require Amtrak to report to Congress information on Amtrak compliance with ities Act of 1990) and the Working Dog Commemorative Coin Act. I kid you not. Talk about Nero fiddling while Rome burns or as one of my friends says "The city is burning and we have way too many fiddlers and most of them can't play." If Johnson is the most consequential speaker then he is lording over the least consequential House of Representatives in history.

The only actions taken by Trump that Biden kept were the tariffs. Now he has doubled down on the Chinese tariffs, ironically imposing them on green items that are not produced in volume in the US. Way to go Brandon.

Biden's tariffs, BYD just launched the world's first plug-in hybrid pickup truck, the Shark, in Mexico for $54,000. BYD and Li have announced plans to build factories in Mexico claiming that the cars and trucks are not intended for the US market. Of course, they are lying.

Biden's trade representative said that the tariffs would not have any impact on US prices saying "I think that that link in terms of tariffs to prices has been largely debunked." Where did she learn her economics?

Have you wondered why the campus protests are so small? As I have noted before, those who are Seemingly to celebrate protesting don't have a clue about the Middle East and are not serious students. In fact, many protestors are not even students. Regardless, the vast majority of students are not participating. Yet the media is filling their 24/7 with campus protests.

Why are most of the tents of the student squatters at all the encampments the same green and white (Hamas' colors)? Did the antisemitic student organizations get a volume discount?

Wouldn't it be great if the neo-Nazis went on campuses to support the protesters in the student encampments?

Augusta Quarry Project Update Foundations Poured, Utilities Installed

Contractor crews are making visible that adding these unique amenities and progress with the $3.6 million upgrades at Augusta Quarry at Fort Dickerson Park installation of restrooms, changing rooms, an expanded overlook, an improved pedestrian path to the water, and new floating beach and swim platforms.

The footings for the five new buildings are in place. Water and electric utilities are being connected. And the full concrete foundations soon will be poured. In addition, more grading has been done on the ramp leading to the water's edge.

"We are on pace to complete this major upgrade and reopen the quarry by late fall, as scheduled," Urban Wilderness Coordinator Wes Soward said.

"While we hated to close the quarry for the summer, we hope that everyone who cherishes Augusta Quarry will agree making this special place safer, more family-friendly and more accessible to more people is worth the sacrifice."

Combined with a new $1.77 million entrance and accessibility improvements in Phase I, investment in Augusta Quarry upgrades totals almost $5.4 million.

Because the quarry is currently an active construction site, with heavy machinery in operation, the area is closed to the public. Vehicles that are parked on the road leading to the quarry or blocking the entrance gate will be subject to towing.

While the quarry and the Augusta Avenue entrance and parking lots will be closed, Soward said the Chapman Highway entrance to Fort Dickerson Park and picnic areas will remain open. The park's upper trails also will remain open.

Hypocrisy on Hate?

As the prosecution for violent crimes lessened and the sentences of those who committed them became less, a drive to classify "hate crimes" and increase the penalties became popular. The very definition of hate crimes is those that were motivated by race, ethnicity or sexual orientation. Even more important than the sentencing of one convicted of a hate crime was the demand that the guilty party be universally condemned. Now things have changed as the Democrats have a very serious antisemitism problem within their party.

The far Left of the Democratic Party's support for Hamas and approval of the October 7 slaughter of innocent civilians, as well as their support for destroying Israel, has caused very notion of hate crimes. The Left has long employed professional organizers and agitators who have helped to mobilize all too often empty-headed students and mobs who have openly and actively harassed and impeded the free movement of Jewish students on campuses and elsewhere. Jewish students have been attacked by these same mobs. Yep, those are crimes and one student leader who insisted "Zionists don't deserve to live" on a streaming video" was free from any form of punishment or disciplinary action until university officials could simply ignore it no longer.

There were 8,873 incidents in 2023 of antisemitic assaults an increase of 140% over the previous year. Two of Knoxville's City Council members identify with the Democratic Socialists of America who, along with some chapters of Black Lives Matter, hailed the Hamas massacre of Israelis as nothing less than an act of liberation. Let's not forget the Columbia professor who professed that the October 7 attack was "awesome." Another professor at Cornell said he was "exhilarated" by the massacre. Suddenly Democrats have seen no evil and heard no evil. There have some problems with the been 1500 incidents of antisemitism reported on to Harrison Butker. Butker is and the people who are college campuses since a 28-year-old kicker for the the October 7 attack and hate crimes are specifically identified through intimidation, harassment, and violence, which includes restricting or impeding free movement. Clearly, Jewish people need not expect the same kind of response as other minority groups when they have been targeted. Much the same happened with the targeting of Asian people because the attackers were Black and that did not fit the narrative being promoted by the mainstream media. That same media nods approvingly as the pro-Hamas antisemites talk about their right to free speech. How does any of that not fall under what they used to call "hate speech?" Because hate speech means - at least to the Left - any speech they don't like. Killing Jews is evidently not hate speech in their book.

Yet the national mainstream media, like the News-Sentinel locally, focuses on other things, like protesters here complaining about hurt hands or not being seen as people. Wow.

More Leftist Hypocrisy

Speaking of free speech, it apparently doesn't extend

Kansas City Chiefs, married and the father of two small children. Recently, Butker made a commencement speech at Benedictine College, a Catholic institution of higher learning. Butker is a Catholic Christian and spoke up for his ideals, which caused a firestorm. People were petitioning for Butker to be fired from the Chiefs, while some squalled his beliefs "endangered" trans people, and it spiraled hysterically from there. No free speech for Harrison Butker! Nope, not at all. The people who are condemning him, by and large, have nothing bad to say about men who go out and impregnate as many women as will have them, seemingly never complain about deadbeat dads or men who leave single women to raise their kids. Butker clearly adores his wife and children and shame on him. The very same people who don't like his being a Christian are many of the same people trying to wrap the pro-Hamas extremists and antisemites into a blanket of free speech for the kind of speech that hasn't been heard openly since the days of Adolf Hitler and his Nazi Party. Other sports

figures have actually done

some pretty awful things

critical of Harrison Butker certainly didn't spend the time condemning a football player for beating the life out of his girlfriend. But then again, neither did they condemn the Hamas terrorists raping little girls and women.

The self-proclaimed folks who say they lead with kindness have no use for someone who extols the virtues of a stay-at-home mom and homemaker. That role is every bit, if not more, important than running a Fortune 500 company. Harrison Butker has as much right to be pro-life as others nor and First Lady Bill and have to be pro-choice and he has the right to state it. As a devout Catholic, why would that surprise anybody? It shouldn't, but the real problem is he opened his mouth and infuriated some extremists by defying the holy of holies of the Left.

Some have even referred to Butker's remarks as hateful, none of whom seem to have condemned the comments of those who want to exterminate an entire race of people from the face of the earth. Just as the Nazis did. You'd think they'd recognize hate speech when they heard it, especially as they spew more of it than anybody else.

Congratulations, Annie and David

Knoxville and Knox County are awfully lucky to have two young people who have a golden touch with their business projects and are equally generous in giving back to the community.

Annie Haslam Colquitt is the granddaughter of Knoxville's most successful and recognizable businessman, Jim Haslam, who, with wife Natalie, began a tradition of family giving to our community. Annie is also the daughter of former Gover-Chrissy Haslam. Annie's husband David is one of the best and brightest young businessmen anywhere with a great personality and an impressive sense of good business. Annie and David Colquitt have bought the RT Lodge in Maryville, a wonderful historic site and are keen to preserve its legacy. The RT Lodge is an East Tennessee gem, and nobody is better able to polish that gem into a glittering, glorious diamond than Annie and David Colquitt. Our entire community owes a debt of gratitude to these two young businesspeople who represent the best of leadership for the future.

project enters its next phase, a follow-up public meeting has been organized to update area residents, businesses and churches.

The public meeting will begin at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, May 29, at the New Harvest Park Community Building, 4775 New Harvest Lane.

Meeting attendees will be introduced to the team with the City's rights-of-way acquisition consultant, Johnson, Mirmiran, and Thompson (JMT).

The ROW acquisition phase is expected to continue for up to 18 months. The project calls for purchasing nearly 60 property easements.

Washington Pike would remain five lanes on the western end of the project area, where Greenway Drive ties in near the Target store. The pike would narrow to three lanes by New Harvest Lane, then expand back to five lanes, including a turn lane, at Steeple Shadow Way and Babelay Road and continue on in that configuration to the City limits at Murphy Road.

At that point, turn lanes would carry traffic onto Murphy or Pullman roads, and Washington Pike to the east would continue in its current two lanes.

We are not governed by the sharpest knives in the drawer. But hey, we vote and elect these people. And as Andrew Breitbart once observed, "Politics is downstream from culture."

I recently quoted Rush Limbaugh regarding liberal progressives. Their policies ruin everything they touch. As examples, consider Bud Light, Disney, Harvard,

I don't make jokes. I just sanctuary cities and blue states like California. And just when I thought it might be safe to again watch NFL football, Roger Goodell and his woke DEI loons disparaged Kansas City Chiefs kicker, Harrison Butker, for his opinions regarding his Catholic faith. Wokesters are not stupid, they are just intolerant, perverse, anti-American and dangerous. Even Bill Maher defended Mr. Butker. So, the NFL is back on my boycott list. Bud Light never left the list; it's a lousy tasting beer.

The focus of this week's essay found me last Monday morning. I read multiple newspapers and news outlets daily, but my favorite paper is the New York Post. It is the oldest newspaper in the country and was begun by Alexander Hamilton in 1801, 50 years before the NY Times. Monday's editorial piece by the accomplished NY Post journalist, Miranda Devine, contrasted the recent graduation speeches by Harrison Butker at a private Catholic college, Tony Fauci, who spoke at the Columbia Medical School graduation and Joe Biden who addressed the historically Black, all-male Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia. As expected, the mainstream and social media expressed outrage that Mr. Butker spoke about his faith and offered his opinions. Folks, the people who scream about tolerance are demonstrably the most intolerant voices in America. They are intolerant of anyone's opinions different from their own.

With her permission, I offer my wife Becky's opinions of her chosen role in our marriage. She has an undergraduate degree from the University of Tennessee in food sciences and also has a master's degree in Child and Family Studies. In our marriage, we see each other as co-equals. I practiced medicine and she was the CEO and manager of our home, finances and family. Anyone who denigrates the role and responsibility of managing the family is not just uninformed, but an ideologically driven fool.

I've come to believe that tolerance is overrated. A friend has a T-shirt that says on the front, "I am intolerant of ... " and continuing on the back reads... "pedophilia, racism and misogyny!" The so-called Silent Majority, the Tea Party conservatives and MAGA types have been too tolerant for too long. All we want is a smaller, less intrusive government, lower taxes and to be left alone. We are now in a "barely civil war" to protect our beliefs and save our country.

Recently, I quoted an anonymous source who opined, "Tolerance leads to acceptance, which promotes corruption of values which promotes ultimate collapse." The cartoon character Pogo once said, "We have met the enemy and he is us." We have been shamed (gaslighted) into tolerating liberal progressive lunacy and elected politicians who gave us the drug and homeless crisis, crime, rising cost of living and inflation, the border invasion, the religion of climate change, but intolerance of traditional religion's values, the all-electric vehicle farce, the destruction of women's sports, the transgender craze and last, but not least, the weaponization of government and its politically directed, corrupt lawfare to interfere with the election system. We've been too tolerant of liberalprogressive loons, but no to read those words at

Furthermore, our elites suppressed the origin of Covid when the modified virus escaped the lab and swept across the world killing millions. Fauci's lieutenant, Dr. Morens, colluded with and covered for Fauci, deleting emails of their Covid coverup and their funding of gain of function research.

And lastly, we read of the disgusting, angry, racist rant by Joe Biden at the Morehouse College graduation. The words and tone harkened to his diatribe at the State of the Union address in January 2024 and his Philadelphia address in 2022 with soldiers and "Hellish" red backdrop. What a disgrace to tell graduates of college that they are victims, incapable of managing their lives because of America's systemic racism.

Biden's words were undoubtedly written by the liberal progressive ideologues who run the Biden administration. But if there is a shred of sanity left in Joe Biden, he chose

I'm done with anti-American, anti-religious, anti-tolerant woke, liberal progressive ideology. They are wolves in sheep's clothing, who lie and manipulate people and the language with euphemisms in their quest for power, money, and prestige.

It is past time to say no to these destroyers. It is time for Americans to stand up and be counted. Of course, there is risk, but we are not being asked to assault the beaches of Normandy, winter at Valley Forge or fight at Gettysburg. I am asking for patriots to be courageous and resolute in defiance of these perverters of our culture and our country. You must vote to remove the destroyers and then we must insist that they are investigated and the guilty punished.

I realize that speaking out puts me at risk of investigation or even being charged with some fake crime like President Trump. Or I might be silenced, as the corrupt and despicable NY Judge Merchan trying to silence President Trump.

The Knoxville FOCUS FROM THE MOUNTAINS BY JADON GIBSON

The Hat with the

By Joe Rector

A few weeks ago, I wrote about the progress of the new Schaad Road. I also wrote about the traffic that had been routed through our subdivision and onto back roads. Here's an update on that story.

Most motorists have been driving carefully through the neighborhood. The speed bumps have slowed many drivers, and those who have chosen to zip up the road have hit the bumps and landed with a satisfying (to residents) thud. Although the number of cars has decreased as parts of the new road have opened, hundreds of cars still pass by our house each day. Neighborhood walkers have ceased their routines for fear of being flattened by one of the speeders.

I do realize the inconvenience for drivers as they try to figure out which way to go at the end of the subdivision road. A detour sign points one way, and that way leads right back to our house. It's when drivers turn left that the real trouble starts.

Fitzgerald Road and Boss Road are the ones that folks must take to reach their destinations. The problem with those roads is that they are not wide enough for two vehicles. They're what the County Roads folks call two "of the many narrow roads in Knox County." No plans are to widen such roads, but drivers are expected to navigate them without trouble.

Those new to these narrow the roads are. They travel at speeds much too fast for the conditions. Upon meeting other cars, many continue zooming and simply edge their vehicles into the yards of residents. Plenty of rainy days have turned these places into muddy areas. Car tires splash the mud onto roads and further destroy yards, all to the fuming anger of homeowners.

Recently, those who live on these narrow roads have taken actions of their own. Some have driven wooden stakes on the edge of their property to keep out intruders. One person decorated the markers with green ribbon so that they could be seen more easily by drivers. Another disgruntled property owner put together a row of metal fence posts and set them close together. At that point, it becomes drive at your own risk. In other words, if cars are approaching each other, one of them must stop to let the other pass. If not, side mirrors might be knocked off the cars Some drivers think up are mean-spirited actions. However, if folks have worked to establish healthy lawns and beds, they have a right to maintain their property and protect it from the wheels of cars, trucks and semis. Yes, tractor-trailer trucks are passing through the neighborhood on the way to destinations.

Rumors fly about completion dates for this section of the road, and the most optimistic is September of this year. That means residents will have to not only deal with waves of dust that come from the steady flow of vehicles but also continue to cope with the construction sites. All in all, none of us who live here are convinced that this new road will cut down on traffic when county agencies and government continue to pass out use-on-review exceptions so that more and more subdivisions can be built. With summer fast approaching, let's all hope that rainy days don't delay too much work and that all of us around here don't choke to death.

Big Red Roses By Jadon Gibson

"The Birth of a Nation," the famous silent movie released in February 1915 was a huge commercial success. It drew large crowds in rural and urban areas alike. The movie dramatized the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln by John Wilkes Booth. It was presented in two parts separated by an intermission.

It was scheduled for a showing in Middlesboro, Kentucky, early in the 1900s. John Estep, a resident of Cumberland Gap about three miles away in Tennessee, hired a two-horse surrey to take his family across Cumberland Mountain to see the movie. Country roads were quite bad in that era and the one across Cumberland Gap was barely passable. Automobiles were rare at the time and horse-drawn vehicles were much more common.

It was a festive affair for the Estep family and young Nola Estep wore her hat with the big red roses. Nola said this was one of her two favorite days of her childhood, the other being when her dad rented a similar surrey and took the family across Cumberland Gap to see a circus in Middlesboro.

"Cumberland Gap had a millinery shop then and we went there and picked out our hats," she wrote later. "They were trimmed to suit our tastes and the lady at the store made my hat with big red roses. That summer I had an exciting time in that hat."

The Esteps moved from Hancock County, Tennessee, a trip of eighteen to twenty miles, where John maintained a farm for several years. He peddled his farm produce to the housewives of Cumberland Gap before the family moved there.

John Estep decided the bustling town of Cumberland Gap offered many opportunities for his family and in March of 1906, he and Minerva packed two wagons and set out with family and belongings for their new location. They sat on the seat in front with the three children and a black dog squeezed in behind amongst their household goods. Other family belongings filled the second adjoining wagon and their cow walked along behind, tethered to the wagon by a rope.

The town was humming with activity yet several folks took time to glance at the arrival of the new family. They couldn't have imagined what a positive impact these new folks would have on the city and county in the years ahead.

"Never had a city looked as big to me as Cumberland Gap did on that day when I saw it for the first time," Nola wrote. "There was no cover on the wagon so Carl, James Dallard and I could view all the wonderful sights as we slowly moved along on the allday journey. Carl tells me he got out of the wagon at times to lead the cow. Our dog would walk along making it a threesome.

"I was only six years old and had never been anywhere except Sunday School and church in the little country church at the top of the long hill from our house. It was different on those trips to church. Mother rode sidesaddle and I rode behind her on the horse, putting my arms around her waist and holding on for dear life."

The summer after the Esteps moved to Cumberland Gap one of Nola's uncles came to town in a wagon laden with produce. He had decided to take up his father's former peddling business and he arrived every week of the selling season. It provided an excellent opportunity for Nola to go back and visit aunts, uncles and cousins in Hancock County.

"On one of those trips when we were about half-way to my uncle's home, after having a lunch of brown sugar and crackers, we got caught in a very bad storm," she recalled. "My uncle put me in the back and covered me with some old blankets and guilts. I was wearing my hat with the big red roses. I took it off and put it under all the cover. I ended up being drenched to the skin but my hat stayed dry and as pretty as ever. I got to wear it for all my aunts, uncles and cousins in Hancock County to see."

Many years later Nola was going through some old penny post-card albums with her two children. Her mother had saved them through the years. On one postcard she told her mother all about the big storm and getting wet to the bone, adding "but my hat with big red roses didn't get a bit wet."

"My children thought it was very funny when I told them about my hat with the red roses. This memory struck a nostalgic note with me and I couldn't stop the tears from coming to my eyes. My children were just bewildered though. They laughed about it and couldn't understand why I was crying so."

Amazingly Nola lived to age 101, Carl to 98 and James Dallard Estep to 97. John Estep, their father, lived to be 100 and Minerva died of cancer at age 80. James Dallard Estep served as mayor of the historic city of Cumberland Gap for eighteen years. Eventually, he was acclaimed as the oldest mayor in Tennessee. Many of the offspring of the Estep family have made meaningful contributions to the area and are continuing to do so today. Thanks to them for this.

London can be playful and needy but also very gentle and pretty chill and likes to hang out just laying down near people. She is very food motivated but shows no guarding of treats, bones, or wet food she has been given so far. London loves playing fetch, chasing bouncy balls, and playing with squeaky toys. She is doing very well with potty training. She walks well on leash and ignores other dogs she passes. London prefers older kids or no kids in her new home. Ask to meet her today!

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

Edith Nourse Rogers' record as the longestserving female member of Congress was only broken by Marcy Kaptur of Ohio in 2012. During the 35 years she served in the House of Representatives, few legislators of either gender have made such an impact on those areas in which they specialized. New members of Congress throughout the years have frequently been counseled by senior colleagues to pick out an area of interest and work hard at becoming an expert in the field. No congressman of the time had more influence on legislation affecting veterans during her time in office than Edith Nourse Rogers. It was Congresswoman Rogers who wrote part of and sponsored the Serviceman's Readjustment Act in 1944. That legislation is better known as the "G.I. Bill" today. The bill established financial and educational benefits for veterans who were returning home after the bloodiest war in human history, the Second World War. It was also Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers who sponsored two other pieces of legislation that paved the way for women. Rogers was the author of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps and the Women's Army Corps, better known as WAC. When Republicans chair of the Veterans Affairs Committee in 1947-1949 and again in 1953-1955. When ailing President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the G.I. Bill into law, he handed the pen to Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers. Nor was Mrs. Rogers' sponsorship of the bills to include women in the armed forces universally hailed. There were those in the news media, as well as elective office, who scorned the bills as an attempt to create a "Petticoat Army." As the leading news magazine of the time noted, "The Women's Army Auxiliary Corps will provide women for the Army's humbler jobs - switchboard operators, cooks, chauffeurs, laundresses, welfare workers, clerks, Aircraft Warning Service spotter & plotters. They will serve under the War Department, with special names for ranks, but with Army pay, Army uniforms and Army discipline." Yet, with her patrician manner, Edith Nourse Rogers deigned not to notice the opposition, telling her colleagues serenely she did not know "a human being who is opposed to the bill." Perhaps the opposition was more about working out the various and somewhat complicated details, such as whether enrollment should be limited, or whether women should be a part of the Army or a separate entity altogether.

It is fitting that the Veterans Hospital in Bedford, Massachusetts, is named for Congresswoman Rogers. A woman of steely determination, Edith Nourse Rogers' interest in veterans derived from her service with the Red Cross in France during the First World War. Mrs. Rogers had been designated by President Warren G. Harding as his representative to visit wounded Americans in hospitals. Presidents Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover reappointed Edith Nourse Rogers as their representative to American veterans.

An aristocrat, Congresswoman Rogers was no mere dilettante. Small of stature with dark brown eyes, the congresswoman always looked younger than her years. Although she followed her husband into Congress after his sudden death, she quickly established herself as a political force to be reckoned with. First elected in a 1925 special election, Mrs. Rogers faced Eugene Foss, a wealthy former three-term governor in the general election. Foss had been, at various times, a Republican and a Edith Nourse Rogers spoke Prohibitionist, and ran in the special election as a won control of the House self-described "Coolidge- downs," Mrs. Rogers said, "I of Representatives, Edith Democrat." Edith Nourse Rogers was confident without being obnoxious. After thrashing Eugene Foss in the general election, she said, "I intend to continue my husband's work. I know I am equal to the detail of the office, for in fact I have been continuing the work ever since my husband died and have managed to keep two secretaries busy. I may not take a very active part in debate, but when the time comes I will be able to stand up and cast my vote when my name is called. I certainly won't be a 'pathetic figure' in Congress." Edith Nourse Rogers became an extraordinarily effective congresswoman for her district and proved to be unbeatable inside her congressional district. Prospective candidates, Republicans or Democrats, rarely bothered to challenge the congresswoman, acknowledging her productivity on behalf of her district and her formidable personal popularity with her constituents. While it may be hard to imagine in today's world, Edith Nourse Rogers' popularity was not confined to Republicans in the House of Representatives. When Democrats in Massachusetts publicly began discussing carving graduation, she went to up her district in the redistricting process, it was John McCormack, the powerful majority leader of the U.S. House of Representatives, who insisted she be left alone. When Mrs. Rogers was celebrating her thirtieth year in office, member after member of the House rose to pay tribute to her; the first was Joe Martin, her colleague from Massachusetts and the House Republican Leader. Then John McCormack got to his feet to laud the gentlelady from the Bay State. After all the members had spoken who wished to, with both grace and wit.

"With all its ups and momentary pause, the congresswoman added, "And the first 30 years are the hardest." When famed aviator Colonel Charles Lindberg lobbied Congress on behalf of airplanes, two of the first passengers to fly with him were Congresswomen Edith Rogers and Katherine Langley of Kentucky. Also amongst those watching those who were brave enough to accompany Colonel Lindberg in a flight was a weathered old gentleman with a bristling white mustache who was so heavily bundled up in an overcoat no one recognized him right off. When the old fellow "smiling like a boy, stepping quickly with excitement" finally removed his hat to shake off the "mud and gravel" stirred up by the propellers of Lindberg's plane, observers spotted 87-yearold Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court Oliver Wendell Holmes. Both of Edith Rogers' parents were members of prominent New England families who could afford to have their daughter privately tutored. At age 14, Edith Nourse attended a private boarding school for girls in Lowell, Massachusetts. After

Madame Julien's School, a "finishing" school in France. Following the example set by her mother, who regularly volunteered her time for worthy causes, Edith became a volunteer for her church as well as for charities. Edith Nourse married John Jacob Rogers in 1907 after he had just graduated from Harvard's Law School. Although a practicing attorney, John Jacob Rogers was described by TIME magazine as a "textile tycoon." The couple settled in a sprawling Victorian house in Lowell and Rogers began ascending the political ladder, having become active in city politics and as a school commissioner. In 1912, John Jacob Rogers of the leading centers of challenger to then-U.S. Senator John F. Kennedy. As is the case of most longterm congressmen, Edith Rogers was adept at promoting and protecting the industries and businesses of her district. The congresswoman suggested to Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley that the uniforms of the Army's enlisted men the battle-scarred visagshould be blue. In true patrician fashion, Mrs. Rogers explained, "Wartime khaki uniforms are drab and tiresome to the eye. . ." Then the congresswoman got to the point. Blue uniforms would mean the necessity of providing enlisted men with black shoes. Mrs. Rogers' district was one

Edith Rogers was one of those in the House of Representatives who loathed the trimming of the budget passed in 1932 when Herbert Hoover sat in the White House. Times were hard due to the Great Depression and as an effort to pare the federal budget, an "economy bill" was passed, which had the effect of firing a spouse if both worked for the government. Opponents raged it amounted to nothing less than a penalty or tax on being married. The burden fell disproportionally on wives; 80% of those employees let go were women. That law was still in effect in 1937 when Democrat John J. Cochran of. Missouri sought to tighten the measure with an amendment to a bill proposed by Congressman Emanuel Celler of New York. Celler was attempting to repeal the unfair law, which Cochran sought to cripple with his amendment to strengthen the legislation. Some speculated the law encouraged some couples to live together, unwed. The Cochran amendment failed and the House repealed the law 203-129. TIME magazine reported, "Broad smiles spread on es of Edith Nourse Rogers, Mary T. Norton, Caroline O'Day" with the defeat of the Cochran amendment and the repeal of the law penalizing married couples. The news magazine, tongue in cheek, stated, "Faraway looks came into the big, beautiful eyes of Government stenographers as they began to dream of Massachusetts.

While still serving in the House of Representatives, John J. Rogers went to Great Britain and later France. Eventually, Rogers volunteered as a private where he trained with an artillery battalion. Edith Rogers accompanied her husband overseas, volunteering first with the Young Men's Christian Association and then as a "Gray Lady" for the American Red Cross. It was there Mrs. Rogers noticed the conditions under which women worked to support the military. Aside from those who worked as nurses, the women were categorized as civilians and received no benefits of any kind. It was a stark contrast to those women from Britain who were part of the military and who received benefits.

In 1924, Edith Rogers served as a presidential elector for Calvin Coolidge. The following year, John J. Rogers died unexpectedly following an operation. At the time of her election to the House of Representatives, Edith Nourse Rogers was the first woman to be elected to Congress from New England.

Politically, although 77 years old, Edith Nourse Rogers was considered the strongest potential

During the 1928 presidential campaign, Edith Nourse Rogers became the first woman to speak at Boston's Faneuil Hall on Independence Day, as TIME magazine put it, "since the Cradle of Liberty first rocked." The congresswoman praised both GOP presidential nominee Herbert Hoover as well as the Democratic nominee, Governor AI Smith of New York.

Ironically, Edith Nourse Rogers was the author of a resolution to retire House members at age 70 ½. She would serve well beyond that age herself. As always, interested in every aspect of the lives of veterans, Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers attended a luncheon with perhaps the most outspoken critic of artificial limbs in the country, Colonel Robert S. Allen. At one time, Allen had been the journalistic partner of nationally known muckraker Drew Pearson. Together, the duo wrote the Washington-Merry-Go-Round column, which was syndicated in newspapers across the country. Allen had quit to fight in the Second World War and lost an arm. Aside from Congresswoman Rogers, in attendance was Major General Paul R. Hawley, head of the Veterans' Administration. General a candidate for reelection in 1960 when she became ill in September. Taken to the hospital, the congresswoman developed pneumonia. Although 79 years Congresswoman old. Rogers was thought to be improving when she died of a sudden heart attack. The congresswoman's physician, Dr. Greene FitzHugh, said Rogers' death was "very sudden." Edith Nourse Rogers' passing came as a shock to the people of her district and fellow members of Congress, especially as she had insisted her illness not be publicly disclosed.

A pioneer of the women's movement, Edith Rogers should be remembered today.

SPRING FLING: SOFTBALL Region title loss to Carter 'focused' Gibbs for state

By Ken Lay

Farragut High School has now won 13 state championships in baseball, including four in the last five completed seasons.

The Admirals might have another championship ring if not for COVID-19, which prematurely ended the 2020 season. They claimed their third consecutive Class 4A State Championship Friday night with a 3-1 victory over Nolensville at Middle Tennessee State University.

Pitcher Cole Draper picked up the win in Farragut's final game on the big stage under head coach Matt Buckner, who announced his intentions to retire after the game.

Draper hurled a complete game for Farragut (40-5), which didn't lose a game to an in-state opponent in 2024. He pitched seven innings. He gave up one run, seven hits and two walks. He recorded three strikeouts for the Admirals, who have won all three Class 4A championships in TSSAA history. Farragut also won the Class 3A State Championship in 2019, before finishing as state runner-up in 2021. Jake Merrick and Lukas Buckner each provided some offensive punches for the Admirals against the Knights in the 2024 season finale. Merrick went 2-for-3. He had a double, and RBI and a run scored. That put the Lady Eagles and Lady Hornets from Knox County in a winnertake-all game Friday and Gibbs came out on top 6-1.

Gibbs' Lacey Keck led the way, pitching a twohitter and striking out five. The only run she gave up was unearned. Keck also helped herself, going 2-for-4 at the plate, scoring a run and driving in two.

Savannah Melo also stood out on offense for the Eagles, going 3-for-4 with a double and triple. She scored one run and had one RBI. Addison Merritt chipped in a RBI double.

The first two innings were scoreless, but Gibbs broke through with two runs in the top of the third. Maliyah Smith singled and stole second. After two outs, Keck's line drive double brought in Smith. Merritt then doubled to centerfield to drive in courtesy runner Madilyn Rutherford.

Gibbs increased its lead to 4-0 in the fifth. Jade Bell singled and Smith followed with a sacrifice bunt. Dakota Large reached on an error and Bell scored. Large then scored on a Keck grounder.

Carter got its only run in the bottom of the fifth when Addison Freeman doubled and two outs later scored on an error by the shortstop. Hicks was caught stealing to end the inning.

Malaney Etherton was the losing pitcher. She gave up nine hits, but three of Gibbs' six runs were unearned. Etherton struck out four and did not allow a base on balls.

COACH MITCHELL REFLECTS ON 6TH WIN AT STATE

What was the key to the win in the title game? Lacey Keck and her defense only allowed Carter 2 hits.

And how did you feel about your team's play from start to finish at the state this year?

Looking back on the 4 games, 5 if you count TN High, we were focused on one thing ... winning state. They didn't look at who we were playing, it was more about playing our best. I wouldn't change anything about our play at the state.

Was there ever a doubt in your mind that this year's team wouldn't make its "annual" trip to the Boro?

Traveling for the Sectional game to TN High made for an extremely difficult path to the state this year. They have a really good team and a great pitcher (UNC-Chapel Hill commit). Winning in Bristol was basically our first game of the state tournament.

How many state titles has Gibbs now won overall ... and how many have come with you as the head coach?

Gibbs has 11 (1983, 1984, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1998, 1999, 2000, 2012, 2017, 2024) As a coach, I have 6

Eckerman 'echo' is loud and clear in state finale

By Steve Williams

Colin Eckerman's prep career ended with an echo. After posting a new TSSAA state meet record time in winning the Division II-AA cross country championship last fall, he capped his outdoor season Wednesday by breaking the state meet record in the 1600-meter run.

Competing at the MTSU track in Murfreesboro, Webb's Eckerman ran a 4:04.55 to erase the existing record of 4:05.34, which had been in the TSSAA record book since 2013.

It was a fitting way to go out in what has been a whirlwind season of success for Colin, a late-bloomer as a distance runner.

"He got cut from the basketball team in his freshman year and decided to come out for cross country," Coach Bobby Holcombe recalled last fall after Eckerman's breakout win. "In his very first race he was timed in 23 minutes, so we never knew in a million years this guy was going to go on and win state.

"His work ethic has been years."

Colin has signed with Furman, a Top 10 team in the nation.

Eckerman, who proved his point over and over that he was an elite distance runner in his career, also placed first in the 3200 9:12.93.

Other local athletes who stood out in Division II-AA included Webb teammate Michael Conley, who placed second in the long jump (22-0¹/₂), second in the 100 dash (10.72) and third in the 200 (21.77).

By Tom Mattingly

These issues are part of the discussion that takes place whenever fans gather. There seems to be no forgetting them, and it doesn't take much to spark discussion.

There were those across the world of Big Orange Country who expressed concern and trepidation concerning a possible trip to Auburn, Ala., instead of Birmingham. There was also the possibility raised of trips to Starkville and Oxford, Miss., taking the place of a journey to Memphis. Then came going to Athens, Ga. In that case, there was not an alternative site. It was not playing the Bulldogs at all between 1938 and 1967.

It took the Vols until 1974 to play in Auburn. They've been there to stay since then, albeit on an irregular basis. Tennessee returned to Starkville in 1987 and Oxford in 1988 after a game at each venue in the early 1950s. Tennessee had never played in Oxford before 1951 and in Starkville only four times (1910, 1920, 1926, and 1950).

It always seemed more convenient to go to Memphis to play Mississippi State or Ole Miss instead of Starkville or Oxford. Even the Bulldogs and Rebels thought it was a good idea.

There was one trip to Starkville that was a comedy of errors. The year was 1950. To begin, the team plane landed at the wrong airport, one that sported grass growing through the cracks in As daylight was rapidly the concrete. Former Vol center Bob Davis remembered that facet of the trip well. The Vols, who would finish 11-1 on the year and win the Dunkel version of Community honchos the national championship, lost to State 7-0.

> The first two games were something special, at least for Vol fans. ABC was present when Tennessee stole a 17-17 tie on Sept. 14, 1968, at Neyland Stadium. leaving Neyland Stadium, quarterback Bubba Wyche tossed a TD pass to wideout Gary Kreis and a twopoint conversion pass to tight end Ken DeLong, each well after the clock had hit double zeroes.

Kreis's catch engendered great controversy. Did he hang onto the ball or not? Color photos Illustrated did nothing to The series with Georgia settle the "controversy." was resumed in 1968 and SEC referee R.P. Williams

Georgia folks thought they had Tennessee right where they wanted them on a rainy Nov. 1, 1969, in Athens. In a game played between the legendary hedges, the Vols won 17-3. The Vols also pitched a shutout in Athens in 1972, winning 14-0.

Vol fans also worried, 23 games played, but the 1996 game, Memphis 21, Tennessee 17, at Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium, still rankles otherwise sensible Vol fans.

Finally, it wasn't too long ago, in the late 1980s, that Alabama and Auburn were squabbling over the venue of the "Iron Bowl."

Tired of the wrangling, Auburn drew a line in the sand. Auburn declared it would play its "home games" in Auburn, a seemingly reasonable request in some circles, an unreasonable one in others.

Alabama threatened all kinds of repercussions, including canceling the series, and went to great lengths to keep the game at Birmingham's Legion Field, a venue seemingly ordained by higher powers.

The games are now being played on each campus at stadiums much larger than Legion Field, and the rivalry hasn't suffered one iota. Alabama partisans had once said "Never!" to playing at Auburn, but the Tide now heads to Jordan-Hare Stadium every other year.

Kirk McNair, publisher of 'Bama Magazine, once wrote that it wasn't every Alabama fan who had to go to Auburn, just the 7,500 fans stipulated in the game contract.

What does all this prove? Merely, that time heals all wounds. Someday, whatevversial across the expanse That series began in of the SEC today will be safely consigned to history, and new ones will arise in their place. The debates will be joined quickly and will again be fiercely fought.

They were riding a fivegame win streak with five straight clean sheets. But the championship game could not have started any worse for South-Doyle. of runs in a game that seemed nearly anticlimactic after the Admirals' comeback victory over Beach Thursday night at Siegel High School.

In that contest, Farragut erased a 10-8 deficit. The Admirals scored five runs in the top of the seventh inning and notched a 13-10 victory against the Buccaneers as Gavin Brewer had a tworun double and Brennon Seigler drove in a run with a sacrifice fly and Eli Evans came up with a scoring double. Charlie Bozeman also had a scoring single in the frame for the Admirals who overcame some shoddy defense, committing six errors against the Knights.

Brewer also hit a home run and ended up with four RBIs in the contest. Michael Delph also doubled and knocked in three runs in the slugfest.

Farragut opened tournament play Tuesday night with an 11-6 victory over the Buccaneers.

Evans and Brewer each hit home runs, while Merrick and Lukas Buckner each came up with doubles. Seigler, meanwhile, had two hits and scored twice.

Wednesday night, Farragut had a hit and two RBIs.
