According to Knox County Public Service Division Director Brent Seymour, local fire and rescue services will benefit greatly funding.

The "found money" comes from state and local to various first responder organizations for equipment and related projects. Seymour told the commission agenda review meeting last week that the exception is funds going to a Karns Training Center.

Following comments about the welcomed funds, Commissioner Larsen Jay said a regional training facility, for the use of all the fire and rescue groups, is needed. He asked what from unexpected federal happened to earlier plans that included property for such a facility.

"It's not (gone) away," recovery funds and is going Seymour said, noting that land originally discussed for a regional facility was found to be too expensive to develop for what "our service partners were able to do." He said plans are

Youth Advisory Board in the works for Knox County By Mike Steely

Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

Knox County Parks and Recreation Director Joseph Mack spoke briefly during the Knox County Commission's agenda review meeting last week and mentioned a proposal that caught some ears.

Mack spoke about an agenda item for today's commission meeting that would create a Knox County Youth Sports Advisory Board. He said that the new board would be a governing body for all youth sports and work is underway on the bylaws.

He said the board would create a facility for non-profits and the county to oversee and the board would put the "onus" back on the community.

"It's a fair way to do things," Mack Commissioner Carson Dailey praised the proposal as a "great

Members may not be a coach or a youth director and may not own or manage a sports team.

Meetings would be held each month at the Sutherland Avenue Parks and Recreation headquarters and an elected chairperson could name special committees.

Baseball Fans Either Love Or Hate The Yankees

By John J. Duncan Jr. duncanj@knoxfocus.com

Ben Affleck, a famous movie star, grew up rooting for the Boston Red Sox. He is quoted on the Yankeeshater.com website as saying "I would rather utter the words 'I worship you, Satan' than (to say) 'My favorite baseball team is the New York Yankees.'"

These words are quoted in the first chapter of a book called "Damn Yankees," which is a collection of columns or articles by 24 well-known writers telling about their love/hate relationship with this famous baseball team.

The first chapter, "I have feelings for the Yankees," is by Roy Blount Jr. and he He blamed it on his Dad. says the Yankees are his favorite team.

In the book, some of the articles are by writers who love the Yankees and some are by writers who hate them. Blount asks, "Is there no middle ground?" and there does not seem

As I wrote in my book, I spent 5½ seasons as a batboy for the Knoxville Smokies. During those years, Knoxville was a farm team for the Baltimore Orioles and then the Detroit Tigers. I was the public address announcer my freshman year at U.T. for the 1966 season.

Because many players went from the Smokies to the Orioles and the Tigers, I rooted for those teams in the American League. I was never a Yankees fan.

In fact, when I found out that one of our neighbors at our lake house in Bean Station was a Yankees fan, I asked him how in the world

Baseball was much bigger and better when I was growing up. It was much more popular than pro-football then. There were only 16 major league teams (30 now) and players stayed longer with the same team. It was much easier to keep up with teams and their players.

Even though I never rooted for the Yankees, they were in the World Series so often, I can tell you the names of most of their players during the late 50s and early 60s. Casey Stengel managed the Yankees for 12 years from 1949-1960. During those seasons, the team was in the World Series ten times and won seven of those championships.

World Series was HUGE, even though it was played during the day and only on black and white TV. I snuck a small transistor radio into study hall at Holston that could have happened. to listen to part of one of the games.

Bob Knisley, by far the biggest teacher at our school, came rushing toward me with a very angry look on his face. I thought I was in big trouble. Then he said in a very stern voice: "What's the score?!"

Because of my association with minor league baseball, I was fascinated to read in the Roy Blount article that he grew up watching the Atlanta Crackers and that their ballpark actually had a giant magnolia tree in center field. The tree was in play, but it was 462 feet from home plate, and only Eddie Matthews, who later was a star player for the Braves, hit a home run over it as an 18-year-old in 1950. Atlanta built a new stadium in 1966 to get the Braves and major league baseball. You can still see the center field magnolia tree on YouTube.

A few weeks ago, I went to Cincinnati to see a Reds-Cardinals game with my two brothers-in-law, Bob Winter and Lynn Strange, and my wife's cousin, Frank Draper. I mentioned that almost no pitchers pitched a full nine-inning game anymore. I looked it up and found that last season, only 7/10 of one percent were games where a complete game was pitched.

A few days later, I was reading a book called "Our Team" about the Cleveland Indians of the late 1940s. This was a book about Bill Veeck, Larry Doby, Bob Feller, and Satchel Paige - all very famous baseball

The book said in 1946, Feller started 42 games as pitcher and completed 36 of them. In the last week of the season, to break the major league strikeout record, he pitched three complete games in six days, along with one fiveinning relief job.

With the sissified, overpaid players of today, a pitcher is paid many millions if he can last for six or seven innings every fifth

In the summers of 1967 and 1968, I worked for the Nixon For President Committee in Washington, and I started in law school at George Washington University in 1969.

I became a big fan of the Washington Senators and even attended their last home game in 1971 before they moved and became the Texas Rangers.

The Senators were almost always bad, and there was a famous old saying - "Washington - first in war, first in peace, last in the American League."

In another story from "Damn Yankees," Steve Rushin wrote that Mickey Mantle, who had a reputation as a big drinker and womanizer, once "joked that he would be turned away at the Pearly Gates, only to be called back by St. Peter, who would tell him: 'God wants to know if you'd sign these six dozen base-

Venezuelans have migrated mostly to other Latin American countries, notably Columbia. Kamala The Chameleon

You read it here first, but it has spread throughout the country following my editorial about "reimagining" Kamala. Evidently, Kamala is the perfect political chameleon. She has demonstrated she can change her political colors and adapt to any background. Bill Baxter passed away on August 18, 2024, at the age of 71. Baxter was the epitome of someone who gave freely of himself and his talents throughout his lifetime. Bill Baxter was deeply involved in the Knoxville community. At an early age, Baxter ran for elective office, losing a close race in the Republican primary. He never ran for elective office again, but Bill Baxter did remain active on behalf of GOP causes and candidates for the rest of his life.

After working as a lawyer, Bill Baxter succeeded his father Pat as president of Holston Gases in 1985. Bower Field zoning changed by Knox Commission

By Mike Steely Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

South Knoxville's popular Bower Field was rezoned in a split vote and a very long meeting last week as the Knox County Commission met in its monthly zoning session. The split 6-3 vote had Commissioners Kim Frazier, Richie Beeler and Rhonda Lee opposing the rezoning across three agenda items.

A Letter to My Daughters

song in a foreign land? Psalm 137:4

As the culture/civil war for the soul of America rages, I often ask myself, will there ever be an end to this strife, this division, this war? Just like the Psalmist, I feel like I'm living in a foreign land.

Recently, I had the opportunity to discuss the upcoming election with a young professional woman. She is married and has two children. Of the many perspectives we shared, the one that struck me was her comment that her life is so busy with work and family that she does not have time to read the news and search for the truth.

I understand because when I was working and raising a family, I didn't have time to focus on politics, the country and the world. It takes time words on a drum head.

How can I sing the Lord's the news and search for truth, which is often elusive. When I was younger I didn't have time to follow my own axiom: "Read widely, consider carefully and sift everything through your own observations and common sense."

> Perhaps I now have too much time for research and reflection. The American poet Walt Whitman once penned, "The world is too much with us." And this battle for the soul of America is certainly taking a toll on me. Wars do that; even culture wars.

December 1776 where the Continental Army was encamped. Cold, privation and sickness were taking a heavy toll on General Washington's forces. To combat the discouragement, Thomas Paine scratched his immortal summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of their country." I will not shrink from my duty and will continue to call out the great evil damaging our country.

I was a pretty good doctor, but I learned to seek the advice of other doctors because facts and knowledge are sometimes not enough. Wisdom is the appropriate use of knowledge and I often called upon the wisdom of more experienced physicians to help me care for my patients. And I learned that it is often wise to seek the perspective of "seasoned citizens" whom you trust. Three thousand years ago the Proverbist had the same perspective (Proverbs 3:5).

Like the Founders of our country, I believe in the lessons of history. In the historical book of 1 Kings 12 the young king Rehoboam, son of Solomon, makes It was miserable at Valley the decision to reject the Forge, Pennsylvania, in advice of experienced elders and instead follow the advice of his young radical friends. > Incidentally, I recently learned that only in America do we say "1st Kings" or "1st Corinthians." The rest of the world refers to these Biblical books as "One Kings" or "One Corinthians." Do you remember the brouhaha some years ago after President Trump used the term "One Corinthians"? He was scorned, but his phrasing was correct. It's funny that Trump is so often proven correct.

> Metaphorically, our country is sick and facing a huge operation on November 5 which will determine a chance for life or certain death. If we listen to the radicals in charge of the Democratic Party or their shock troops in the streets and vote for Kamala, the patient will not survive.

> If you want higher taxes, floods of illegals, less freedom and bigger government, vote for Harris and her trillion dollar price-control policy (Kamala-nomics) which even the Washington Post and CNN labeled as disastrous. If you want lower taxes, safety, smaller government and individual freedom, vote for President Trump. It's truly that simple,

> As we talked, the young professional seemed to be focused on personality rather than policy regarding

She mentioned the conver- American press has violatsation of Trump with Billy Bush of Access Hollywood which was surreptitiously recorded and given to the Washington Post in 2005. It wasn't until 2016 that it was reported by the NY Times, when it could be most damaging to Trump.

I offer no excuses for the disgusting conversation, but it should shock no one that men can be crass. In fact, without women, men would be savages. We can be especially crude in "locker room" braggadocio. Admittedly, I've told crude jokes, but I won't ask for a show of similarly guilty

I did not tell the young professional about Kamala's affair with the married Willy Brown. Nor did I mention that Doug Emhoff impregnated the nanny of his children. We are all sinners and grace is available to all.

This election should be about policy rather than personality. The policy records of President Trump and Kamala Harris are obvia proven record; Harris' record is a disaster. I don't plan to have Donald Trump over for supper, but I'd like him to be America's CEO because he is a proven manager/leader.

The first amendment to our Constitution guarantees freedom of the ed that trust and are now undependable sources of truth. The border czar mismanaged the border and the media covered for her. The media said the George Floyd riots were "mostly peaceful." Democrat VP candidate Walz let Minneapolis burn while Harris raised money for the rioters. Harris and the decrepit Biden tell us the economy is recovering, but as we buy gas and food we know that is a lie. Last week the Harris/Biden Administration was forced to revise the 2024 jobs report down by 818,000. All year they lied about the number of jobs created. We are in for a stormy ride this fall. The radical NY Judge Merchan may try to put Trump in jail after his Star Chamber trial. And if Trump wins re-election be prepared for riots by the unhinged Democrat base and for Democrat pols to resist certifying Trump's re-election.

I urge you to vote early ous. President Trump has and "bank your vote" because I predict problems on Election Day. And it is my hope that you will share this letter with others, especially young voters.

Fragile & Fading List released by Knox Heritage

Senior Writer steelym@knoxfocus.com

Local landmarks, historic properties and endangered neighborhoods were named Tuesday by Knox Heritage. The list included the categories Fading Fast, Still Fragile and Moving Forward.

The non-profit organization of preservationists has a mission of protecting Knoxville's unique character and preserving it for future generations.

"We believe that community involvement is crucial for preservation," Knox Heritage Executive Director, Christine Cloninger said. "This list, along with one-on-one outreach to property owners, is a tool Standard Knitting Mill on Washington to strengthen community advocacy, encouraging stakeholders, residents, businesses and local leaders to collaborate and develop preservation strategies before these endangered historic sites are lost forever."

On the "Fading Fast" list is the Lord Lindsey House at 615 West Hill Avenue. Built as a private home in 1901, the structure has served as a church, a restaurant and an event center. Knox Heritage is looking for a way to preserve the empty building.

Also making that list were the JFG Sign, the Paul Howard House on Broadway, Knoxville College, and the Avenue.

The Still Fragile list includes the West View Cemetery District on Keith Avenue, and the historic neighborhoods of Fort Sanders, Parkridge and Mechanicsville.

Two historic sites made the Moving Forward category where improvements in preservation are underway. The Howell House at the Botanical Gardens and Arboretum on Wimpole Avenue needs repairs. The old Giffin School on Beech Street is being transformed into a development called Historic Giffin Square to provide residential units.

The Lord Lindsey House is on the "Fading Fast" list of local historic sites announced last week by Knox Heritage.

New Downtown Connector

KAT is also introducing a new Downtown Connector, running every 12 minutes, 7 days a week, using all-electric buses. This addition will contribute to reduced air and noise pollution in the downtown area, aligning with KAT's commitment to sustainability.

Ongoing Commitment to Improvement

KAT will continue to assess the performance of our services and implement improvements as needed, and as our capabilities allow, ensuring that the transit network evolves with the needs of the community.

Background on KAT Reimagined

The KAT Reimagined project was initiated to address public demand for more frequent and consistent service throughout the week. This comprehensive reimagining of the bus network involved extensive public outreach and engagement, including input from hundreds of bus passengers, over 40 organizations representing diverse community interests, and more than 1,000 participants in online and in-person surveys. Over 100 individuals also attended public meetings, both via Zoom and in person.

Throughout the process, KAT explored different transit priorities, balancing the need for more frequent trips in key areas to encourage ridership with the goal of expanding coverage to more locations, albeit with less frequent service. After multiple rounds of draft networks and public consultations, the final KAT Reimagined bus network was approved in April 2024.

Plan Your Trip

Passengers don't have to wait until launch day to plan their trips. The Transit app now features a bus network preview tool, allowing users to explore the new routes in advance. To download this free app, search 'Transit' in your app store.

For more information on how to use this tool or to review the new route maps and schedules, visit katbus.com. Printed Route maps and schedules are also available at Knoxville Station.

The Gentleman From Alabama George Huddleston

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill rayhill865@gmail.com

Courtly, nicely dressed and usually wearing a black bowtie, George Huddleston, to all outward appearances, seemed to be a typical Southern congressman. A fiery speaker, Huddleston had been a successful attorney in Birmingham, although he preferred representing the employees rather than the employers. One of the best debaters in the House of Representatives during the decades he served in Congress, George Huddleston wielded a frequently tart tongue to powerful effect. Yet George Huddleston was not at all a typical Southern congressman of his time. The congressman was a critic of the Ku Klux Klan when that organization was highly powerful in Alabama. When first elected to Congress, George Huddleston was a strong advocate for the passage of progressive laws, as well as being one of the very few Southern congressman friendly to organized labor and supportive of the idea

Described by the premier news magazine of its day, TIME, as a "thin little wisp of a man who wears slippers in his office." TIME noted Congressman Huddleston's penchant for giving in to "vast and vociferous indignations." The news magazine thought the personally "the South's only radical."

of racial equality.

One of the more notable episodes of Congressman George Huddleston's indignation was his breaking a ketchup bottle over the head of his primary opponent during a heated argument in a diner.

Another example of Huddleston's vast indignation was his reaction to one of the most hardfought issues during his time in Congress; the Wheeler-Rayburn Public Utility Bill, which would dissolve the great holding companies within seven years. The mighty private power interests fought back with an army of shrewd and very well-paid lobbyists, which descended upon the Capitol. Even the influence of the most popular Democrat in the country, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, seemed to fade in the onslaught by the horde of power lobbyists. The House whips found it was some thirty votes away from a majority, even with the pressure being exerted by the White House and the congressional leadership. The lobbyists had shrewdly encouraged the public to inundate Congress with letters and telegrams by scaring the hell out of them, warning folks their sav-

"Before we had the first hearing on this bill the chairman of our committee (Sam Rayburn of Texas) radioed from one end of the country to the other telling people how bad the utilities were and how much this kind of legislation was needed," Huddleston cried.

"He was not alone in riding this wave," Huddleston said darkly. "The chief executive through his all-powerful influence had repeatedly done so. Let us have done with this talk of propaganda. Both sides are guilty. Both have interfered with a fair and just decision upon the part of Congress."

Born in Lebanon in Wilson County, Tennessee, George Huddleston earned his law degree from Cumberland School of Law. Huddleston moved to Birmingham, Alabama, where he practiced law from 1891 until 1911 when he retired, purchasing 50,000 acres "in the piney wealthy Huddleston was ed every two years until Deal, Huddleston reiterated Congressman Huddleston the misery of people by refused to issue any stateproductive congressman, seeking to label products produced by either child or prison labor for consumers. When the administration of President Woodrow Wilson curtailed the right to free speech, Congressman Huddleston snapped, "In a time like this. . .it takes a lion-hearted courage for a man to stand up on his feet and dare to speak for peace." Huddleston worked for the repeal of the 1918 Sedition Bill precisely because of its oppressive restrictions upon free

> George Huddleston had been opposed to the entry of the United States in the First World War as well as the Selective Service Act. Congressman Huddleston did vote for the declaration of war against the German Empire and her allies. Like many of his fellow progressives in Congress, Huddleston believed the burden of paying for the war should come out of the pocketbooks of big business, industrialists, and the publishers who stood to profit from the conflict.

George Huddleston first came to Congress by succeeding a towering figure in both national and Alabama politics. When ings would disappear if the Congressman Oscar W. Underwood moved from the House to the United States Senate, George Huddleston ran in the Democratic primary to succeed him. The young attorney ran on the slogan of "Honesty and Independence." For 22 years, George Huddleston served in the House of Representatives, representing Birmingham. Upon his arrival in Washington, D.C., the new congressman was assigned to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

When he was first elected, Huddleston was considered a bright-eyed liberal, but he also lived up to his slogan of being independent in his thinking. Many observers thought the Alabama congressman became increasingly conservative the longer he remained in the House. By the advent of Franklin Roosevelt and the New Deal, George hills of Shelby County." First Huddleston seemed to be elected in 1914, George drifting rightward. Congressman Huddleston rejected the notion he had become more conservative over time. "My principles remain now as always - - - I have not changed," Huddleston insisted. "Some who once criticized me as radical now call me conservative. The same is in them and not Huddleston was acutely aware of the suffering inflicted upon his own people in particular and Americans in general. Testifying on behalf of a bill in a Senate committee, Congressman Huddleston bluntly told senators, "Any thought that there has been no starvation, that no man has starved and no man will starve is the rankest nonsense. Men are actually starving in their thousands today ... "

To those who doubted his liberalism, Huddleston pointed to three New Deal measures, which he had proposed before they were passed during the New Deal. Congressman legislation for home building, which became law under President Roosevelt's Home Loan Act. Huddleston had also sponsored a bill to provide aid and relief to those citizens left destitute by the Great Depression before the New Deal. George Huddleston was also one of the first Members of Congress to advocate for public works legislation, which became a reality during the New Deal.

Huddleston had sponsored

After being reelected to the House in 1916, the 47-year-old Congressman George Huddleston married Bertha Baxley the following year. The couple had five children. Throughout his career in Congress, most of the newspapers in Alabama railed against George Huddleston because of his economic views. Some newspation to the congressman in his Birmingham led to a serious opponent inside the Democratic primary in 1918, but Huddleston won a relatively close race, winning with big majorities in the more rural areas, as well as carrying those precincts where miners made up most of the voting base. Congressman Huddleston argued for the rights of immigrants to live peacefully, without harassment and was supportive of the American Federation of Labor, which was anathema to many businessmen. The congressman's largely pacificist point of view caused the Birmingham News to call his own patriotism and loyalty to country into question during the First World War. Congressman Huddleston had riled President Wilson enough so that the occupant of the White House sent a public letter condemning Huddleston's voting record in the House of Representatives.

Yet there were limits to George Huddleston's political independence. Although outspoken in his opposition to the Ku Klux Klan, the congressman voted against an anti-lynching bill in 1922. Huddleston realized to do otherwise would jeopardize his standing in his congressional district. Huddleston worked hard to pass legislation to help unemployed veterans get jobs and was one of the moving spirits in the passage of the 1933 Securities Act, which brought about federal regulation of the financial industry following the crash of the stock Great Depression.

Huddleston was caustic in his criticisms of President Herbert Hoover for having failed to alleviate much of the suffering caused by the Depression. The Alabama congressman was chosen by his party to respond to President Hoover's State of the Union address in 1931. Huddleston hammered the Chief Executive for Hoover's failure to provide aid to Americans impoverished by the Depression. Huddleston personally sponsored a bill to alloper editors flatly called cate $100 million to ease to the quick. Although later excorirubber stamp every measure sought by President Roosevelt, George Huddleston proved to be a leader in shepherding New Deal legislation through the House. Huddleston personally steered no less than fifteen major bills through the House of Representatives. George Huddleston seemed likely to remain in Congress as long as he wished. The Alabamian had been reelected to the House in 1934 by winning the only election that mattered, the Democratic primary, with better than 60% of the vote.

As it oftentimes the case, political independence frequently carries with it a hefty price tag. Congressman Huddleston's opposition to the utilities bill helped to seriously erode his support back home. Huddleston faced 42-year-old Luther Patrick in the Democratic primary. Patrick was an attorney by profession, but he was also a sometime poet and radio personality and humorist. Patrick homed in on Huddleston's having refused to support the president, as well as depicting the incumbent as having sided with the private power lobby instead of public power and the people. It was a politically potent argument in Tennessee, home of the TVA, and almost equally so in Alabama.

Facing five opponents in the first primary, Congressman George Huddleston won a plurality of the vote, but the incumbent was only ahead of Luther Patrick by fewer than 4,000 ballots. With no candidate having received a majority of the vote, the congressman and Patrick faced one another in the run-off election. The contest was hard fought and bitter, the highlight of the race was the two opponents meeting in a restaurant where the congressman broke a bottle of ketchup or "sauce" over Luther Patrick's head. Patrick insinuated the members of Alabama's congressional delegation wished to see George Huddleston defeated for reelection. Congressman Sam Hobbs promptly wrote Patrick a letter, a copy of which he released to the press, opposed to Huddleston. As the election results market and the onset of the trickled in, Huddleston may well have wished he had hit Congressman Patrick harder. The challenger handily defeated the incumbent, winning quite nearly 60% of the vote. George Huddleston never again sought public office. Having sold off 46,000 of his 50,000 acres, the former congressman had invested his profits in real estate, which provided him a nice income. Once defeated, Congressman George Huddleston went home to Alabama. As is almost always the case, the rejection by the voters of his district was painful and stung view to newsmen for a full decade before breaking his self-imposed silence. George Huddleston lived long enough to see a vindication of sorts from his defeat for reelection. That ated for his own failure to came with the election of his son and namesake to Congress in 1954. What the elder Huddleston did not live to see was the astonishing defeat of his son in 1964 by, of all things, a Republican. As Barry Goldwater was carrying Alabama easily over Lyndon Johnson, John Buchanan beat Congressman George Huddleston Jr. by 21%.

Big plays lift Karns to 29-14 win over Hawks

By Steve Williams

It was the type of game one might expect in a season opener. A lot of flags for penalties, particularly by host Karns.

But the Beavers made up for them with a bunch of big plays and avenged last year's loss to rival Hardin Valley with a 29-14 payback Friday night at the R.T. Everette Sports Complex.

So, the rotating trophy that reads "Pride of Pellissippi" is now in Karns'

The Beavers' little but 240-pound defensive lineman picked off two passes and received many pats on the back from teammates. One interception by a DL is rare; two in a game is almost unheard of.

"We had a lot of critical touchdown pass to Weston moments when we needed a big play and we had guys step up and make big plays when we needed to," said

> Talking about big plays, Warren added: "I want somebody to find out when the last time a D-lineman in East Tennessee had two picks in a game."

Linebacker Alex Idol, "the quarterback of Karns' defense," contributed 11 tackles in the victory.

After Nathan Holbrook's opening kickoff sailed into the end zone for a touchback, Karns was penalized 10 yards on the first play from scrimmage.

Host Bearden and West ended Week 1 of the 2024 high school football season with a bang Saturday night.

With an overflow crowd watching, the Bulldogs posted a 31-24 win in a three overtime thriller.

Torian Riggins scored a touchdown on a 3-yard run to give Bearden the lead in the third OT period and William Pendergrass kicked the extra point. The two-time defending state champion Rebels failed to score in their turn.

The game was tied 21-all at the end of regulation.

Other Week 1 highlights included Halls shutting out Campbell County 41-0 on the road and Gibbs rolling past Union County 37-8. These two rivals will tangle this week at Halls.

Equipment guy to ball boy, Central to honor Wininger

By Steve Williams

David Wininger still remembers wanting to be a quarterback when he came to Central High School as a freshman in 1982.

It didn't turn out that way, but Dave has become a quarterback's best friend at CHS for 43 years as the Bobcats' "ball boy."

Now 58 years old, he's still going strong in that position and looks back on his career with pride and the tradition he has maintained, which just happen to coincide with the school's motto of "pride and tradition."

Wininger will be honored for his longtime contributions to the football program this coming Friday night prior to Central's home game against Maryville.

Dave said he likes the fact that this special game will be played against the Red Rebels from Blount County, one of the state's top teams for many years. He knows it will be a tough battle, but he'll do his job and hope the Bobcats do

"I wanted to play (on the football team) and my dad told me that there may be something better for you than doing that," Wininger recently recalled. "And I said well okay, so I just took it at that. I'll just go back and see if there was anything I can do for them on the sideline on Friday night. "I started doing the equipment and stuff and was a water boy. I was holding the football for the field goal kickers in practice and getting to know the players and especially the quarterbacks.

"So I stuck with it from then on and hadn't let go of it." Wininger said he started being a ball boy in the fall of 1988; the year Todd Helton was a freshman at Central. "It was different than what I was doing and I had to have the officials tell me what they wanted done and I had to catch on, especially if it rained," he said. "Rainy days were probably the hardest ones for keeping the footballs dry. But it turned out to be better than what I thought it would be.

"It was fun. Going to other schools and seeing other football players and stuff. I didn't quit. I stuck with it and I really didn't think that I would be doing it this long. Working this many ball games, you know, I've been blessed to be around it this long. And people have supported me through the Quarterbacks are not the only players that need the ball to be dry. You can put punters, kickers, centers and long snappers in that group, too.

"Since we've got turf, it's not as bad," said Dave. "I do it now with ease. It's fun."

Wininger, who also has been a custodian at Central for 33 years, said on home games he arrives at school before 3 o'clock and does some work before heading to the field to get everything ready before the kickoff.

"On the away games, I take off and leave straight from my house and go to the fieldhouse," said Dave. "I ride the bus with the team everywhere we go and I've met a lot of head football coaches like that."

Eddie Courtney, who stepped down as head coach at Farragut this year, became one of Wininger's favorite coaches over the years.

"Courtney is a good one and I've met more than that," said Dave. "They've been real supported of me ... and they think it's great that I've stuck with it this

when they were at Halls, and George Quarles when he was at Maryville. "I've also got to know

Shepherd and Kevin Julian players from the opposite side and it's just fun going to these away games where you get to see these other high schools that you've never seen before. And I've seen a lot of high schools that I didn't even know existed in East Tennessee, and I'm like 'golly bum,' that was a big high school."

Wininger also is wellknown and respected by the officials.

"I'll wave at them. And they'll say: 'Well, we don't have to worry about the footballs tonight.' I've got to know a lot of officials that way. It makes you feel you're doing your job when they say, 'Well, we don't have to worry about that."

Wininger also commented on the young kids start-

"They'll throw footballs on the sideline and they're not paying attention," he pointed out. "And I say, you know, I take a job seriously, and when I have to do a job,

I don't play around with it. "I've had some of (the young ones) on my sideline and they've asked me how long I've been doing it and I've told them. I had one little guy say: 'You've been on the sideline that long!!!?' And I answer yell. I started out doing just like what you're doing right now. And they're like, 'Oh man that's neat.'

had here at Central has been different than most. They always say, 'These are the two (footballs) that I want to use tonight Dave,' and I say OK, I'll take care of you. And usually I do."

Ryan Bolton, Class of 2022, is one of the rare football players who played quarterback, punted and was a holder for the placekickers in his career at

"Working with Dave, you knew he was going to do his job," said Ryan. "I was fortunate to work with him. He took great pride in his job and always made sure the footballs were in the condition I preferred."

Wininger has worked under six head coaches at Central, starting with Harold Taylor his freshman year, and then Joel Helton, who was in charge of the Bobcats' program for 27 years (1984-2010). Joe Haskell was head coach for three years after Helton. Bryson Rosser took the reins in 2014 and guided the Bobcats to three straight state finals, including back-to-back Class 5A titles in 2018 and 2019.

Nick Craney was Central's head coach the next four years and Kevin Lane came aboard this season.

During the lean years, "I was going to stick with the team," said Wininger. "I wasn't going to give up on them.'

Following the 2018 state championship, Coach Rosser presented Dave with a special token of appreciation.

"He had a replica gold ball made for me and give it to me at the football banquet that year," said Dave. "I've got it in my house in my bedroom, so I've enjoyed that and then we went back-to-back the year after that. "It has been a great ride doing this." The actual number of "Each quarterback I've games Wininger has been a ball boy at Central is currently 430 (from the 1988 season until now). But if you include 36 jamboree games (1988-2024) and the 64 other Central games he "worked" from 1982-

'The die seemed cast for intercollegiate football in Knoxville' have waited foranxiously, in many cases—is here. Tennessee football returns Saturday this (Aug. 31) against Chattanooga on the legendary field

By Tom Mattingly

and in the equally legendary stadium that has hosted Vol football since 1921. The naming of the field pays tribute to Col. William Simpson Shields and his wife, Alice Watkins Shields, who are credited with a $40,000 gift to help make the stadium a reality. That gift is equivalent to $702,882.68 today. The game took place in a stadium named for former head coach Gen. Robert Reese Neyland a year later. Gen. Neyland led the way in establishing the Tennessee winning tradition.

All of this excitement began on Nov. 21, 1891, when Tennessee played its first football game in Chattanooga against the University of the South, aka

For perspective, Neyland had not yet been born, making his earthly debut on Feb. 17, 1892, in Greenville, Texas. Nathan Washington Dougherty, born on Scott County, Va., was five years old. Both would prove to be influential figures in the program's growth and development.

The final tally was 24-0. It was obviously a difficult beginning, but the die seemed cast for intercollegiate football in Knoxville. There had been a game scheduled for that day

at Maryville, as historian Ron Allen reports. That game was never played, Tennessee opting for the game at Chattanooga. Allen also notes there may have been a game against a local team a few days earlier, and a game played on Thanksgiving Day, but those games have not made it into the Tennessee record books. "The game of football is beginning to obtain a foothold here," the Knoxville Journal reported the day before the Sewanee game. "The cadets of the university have organized a team, and they go to Chattanooga tomorrow to meet the Sewanee team. They have an eleven which is an honor to the university they represent. The rush line is a March 23, 1886, in heavy one and in it is numbered Mr. Denlinger, an ex-Princeton player, who is now professor in the university gymnasium."

Moore was captain of the 1892 team and is credited for school colors being orange and white, although it would be 1922 before the Vols would appear in the now-famous orange jerseys. For many fans in those days, baseball was the sport of choice on campus. The Knoxville Journal noted that, "If we are routed in this game, we will send our baseball team down next spring to balance up accounts." Russ Bebb reported in his 1973 history of Tennessee football that the results of the game were not reported in Knoxville newspapers until Nov. 25. Bebb also wrote that the story was "probably reluctantly" printed. There had been a brief mention in the Journal's Nov. 22 edition of the game being played, but offering no details.

Game reports indicated that the contest was more like rugby. Reports also indicated that around 100 fans witnessed the game. There are larger crowds today at Tennessee's "closed scrimmages."

The headline of the Nov. 25 Journal story was vintage: "SEWANEE WON: Our University Boys Are Not In It With Them." The game story, brief as it was, was "buried on page 7," Bebb

"The down train this a.m. brought 46 Knoxville boys from the University of Tennessee, who came to meet the Sewanee boys and contest for the football championship of the state," an unnamed journalist wrote. "The Sewanee team came the night previous. Sewanee wore the purple colors, Knoxville the Orange and White, and the two teams have owned the town. A heavy rain had been falling all day, and the boys played in the rain. Sewanee won easily by the score of 24 to nothing. After the game, all the boys took in the theatre."

A campus publication called the "University Student" reported that one player was undaunted by the outcome. "It was the first game of our team, and was played after a long tiresome ride that morning. We are not ashamed of our defeat, for it took a good team to beat us," the story

That was then. This is

There has been nothing humble about the growth and development of Vol football over the years. It all started, in the rain, 133 years ago with a game in Chattanooga. As more than 100,000 fans find their way to Neyland Stadium on fall Saturdays today, they will say quite clearly that there's no place they'd rather be.

fourth-and-four pass was batted down.

After the Hawks went three-and-out, the fast and shifty Westfield had a good punt return, but it was nullified by a holding penalty.

Turner got Karns out of the hole with three good runs, including a 52-yarder when he busted through the line. A 27-yard halfback pass for a touchdown on the next play, however, was nullified by another holding infraction.

The Beavers shook off that mistake with Turner's 29-yard pass to Westfield that put the ball at the HVA 4. Turner powered his way across the goal line on third-and-one and added a 2-point conversion run up the middle to give Karns an 8-0 lead with 2:43 showing on the first quarter clock.

Slover, Karns' new QB this season, completed two short passes early in the second quarter but was intercepted on a third-andfive pass that gave Hardin Valley good field position at the Karns 32.

Dylan Umansky completed a 24-yard pass to Kaden Cutcher, who took it in from the 1 on the next play. Holbrook's PAT kick the home was not just for rest and relaxation. Your home came to symbolize

The foolish man doesn't do a death, bad news, a failed anything with Jesus' teachings. Jesus doesn't say why. Maybe they are too busy, or tired and worn out - finding things too hard right now. Maybe they prefer a different rabbi. Jesus doesn't say. Jesus lets us find ourselves in the story. Where are you at in practicing his teaching?

In the short run, you can't tell those who practice Jesus' teachings and those who don't - house on the rock, house on the sand. Both homes look the same. They both might have pets and children. Both homes look the same until the flood comes. Jesus uses "flood" as a metaphor to mean some type of marriage, some kind of trauma - a flood. It is not if the flood comes, but when the flood comes. Jesus is honest about the human condition. Both the wise and the foolish will go through the flood. Life is hard, even when it is good. If you expect life to be easy and it is not, it becomes harder. But if you expect life to be hard and you have Jesus, you will get through it. When the flood comes, it will shake the life of your house to the core and reveal what your life is built upon. If your life is built on the foundation of Jesus Christ, when those floods come, you can stand.

Your house is your life. We are all building something. You are building a life. What are you building your life on? What is the bedrock of your life? Build your life on the firm foundation of Jesus and his teaching, putting his words into practice, living it out in community, by the power of the Holy Spirit.
